Solutions to Oregon Consumer Problems

By PATTI HEALY
850 East 15th
Eugene, Oregon 97403

Sally, a Heppner housewife, buys a $300 washer on credit and the retailer, Mr. Jones carries the contract. Three months after purchase, Sally discovers a defect and returns the washer. Mr. Jones accepts the item, but demands Sally pay him $50—the difference between what Sally still owes him on the contract and what Mr. Jones thinks he can resell the washer for.

What can Sally do? What can any Oregon consumer do in a similar frustrating situation? Sally probably does not know it, but she has some protection under a new Oregon law, effective July 1, 1971. Since her unpaid balance is less than $700, Sally probably does not owe the retail seller any money unless she has damaged the washer. This buyer-seller conflict is typical of situations facing many Oregon consumers of personal, family or household goods or services. Many of such conflicts are being resolved under the new law, such as consumer problems from the home solicitation sale.

The new law also defines unlawful business practices. It spells out consumer rights and responsibilities as well as those of people engaged in retail sales or services. It tells the district attorney how to handle consumer problems and how to deal with violations of the law. Furthermore, it described legal contract relationships between sellers and buyers, as well as those between borrowers and lenders.

If Sally or any other Oregon consumer or retailer has been treated unfairly, there are agencies that can and will help. On the local level, the Chamber of Commerce and the District Attorney will handle complaints. State-wide, one can write to the Attorney General or the newly established Consumer Protection Division within the Department of Justice in Salem. One may even contact a lawyer, for in some cases the court may award attorney fees if the plaintiff's claim is justified.

Some students in a University of Oregon English class have been studying this bill. They have come to realize why the average citizen does not understand his legal rights and responsibilities. They feel the new law will be beneficial only to the extent that all consumers and retailers understand it. Thus, they are presenting their understanding of the bill to the public throughout the state by means of local newspapers and other available media. This article is one such presentation. Subsequent articles will discuss certain sections of the bill of special interest to Oregon consumers.

OUR COMPETITION RECOMMENDS BRONATE®

Our competitors think so highly of Bronate as a broad-leaf weed killer in wheat and other grain crops that they want you to tank mix their products with Bronate.

While we appreciate the compliment, we don't necessarily go along with the recommendation.

Because while the addition of less effective herbicides to Bronate may help the other herbicides, it doesn't help Bronate. Matter of fact, it can hurt Bronate.

Unlike many other herbicides, Bronate kills your weeds without damaging your wheat. And tank-mixing reduces Bronate's high degree of selectivity.

Also, unlike other herbicides, Bronate isn't restricted to any particular soil type or condition. And tank-mixing limits Bronate's wide range of application.

Use Bronate alone if your weed problems include Tarweed, Gromwell, Henbit, Dogfennel, Crowfoot, Purple Mustard, and the rest of the Mustard family. Or any of the 23 other kinds of weeds listed on the Bronate label.

Our experience has shown that Bronate used alone has increased productivity for Northwest wheat farmers by as much as 20 bushels per acre.

Is it any wonder our competitors recommend Bronate?

For more information on how Bronate can help you, see your supplier or write Mr. R. P. Rich, Rhodia/Chipman Division, 120 Jersey Avenue, New Brunswick, N.J. 08903.
