

Need for More Info on Boys', Girls' State Told

"Six out of 10 boys I saw at the Elks Contest at Hermiston Saturday had been to Boys State," Craig Munkers told assembled members of the American Legion and Auxiliary recently.

The Boys State delegates, Craig, Charlie Pointer, Steve Rhea, Tom Cutsforth and John Sumner, all made the same point that they didn't know enough about the program before they went to Corvallis.

Members of the Junior class are selected on a basis of leadership, character, courage, honesty, scholarship and community participation and service as delegates to both Boys State and Girls State. Junior are chosen so that during their senior year, they can use what they learned and tell it to the next class.

Both programs, Boys State on the Oregon State campus and Girls State on Willamette are a week's school of government. They become members of political parties, experience nominating candidates, campaigning, voting, electing and installing officers.

Charlie Pointer said he didn't learn so much about government but lots about people. He especially was impressed with the Memorial Service honoring all members of the armed services who have been killed in action.

Steve Rhea said they were given two choices to turn out for the choir or do calisthenics. He chose to sing in the Memorial Choir. Of the delegates he said, "They were brilliant and fantastic guys."

He learned much from the "rap" sessions, the 1200 4-H girls and the Memorial Service where he got the real purpose for the whole thing.

Craig Munkers went out for everything sports, track, swimming, tennis, basketball, played in the marching band; "I learned a lot about government but the greatest was meeting the guys."

Tom Cutsforth said "You had to go meet people and make new friends. They separate you from your school mates and there you are in the middle of 550 boys." Tom gave the days schedules and displayed his scarp book of Boys State memorabilia which included the daily paper printed by the boys.

John Sumner mentioned how much he enjoyed the mock trial with Boys State delegates as members of the jury.

Diane Mills and Barbara Allstott reported for Girls State. "Girls State sing everywhere they go", they said. Diane was elected city councilman who passed a city ordinance.

Phil McClain, freshman from Forest Grove, has been here a few days visiting his aunt and uncle, the Charlie Heards. Phil has been active in the print shop as he is interested in journalism.

MINOR WORK PERMITS ISSUED HERE

The Oregon Wage and Hour Commission is changing to a new work permit system making it easier for minors to obtain jobs, according to George Johnston, Area Extension Agent. Any minor, age 14 through 17, who makes application will be issued, without charge, a permanent, wallet sized work permit card made of plastic.

All you have to do to get this new type of permit is fill out and return the application available at the Extension office.

After you receive your permit you will have to show it when you start a job, and supply the information needed by the employer for the Employer Certificate.

Employer Certificates, along with other information, are also available at the Extension office.

Farm Officials Attend State Meet

Four Morrow farm program administrators have just returned from a two-day conference with their counterparts from throughout the State, where they were briefed and updated on the latest developments on the Federal farm programs.

Attending from Morrow County were Mr. and Mrs. Roy Martin, Chairman of the County ASC Committee, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Carlson, Vice Chairman, Allen Hughes, Alternate Member, Mr. and Mrs. David McLeod, County Executive Director, and Mr. and Mrs. Delmer Buschke. Mrs. Buschke received an award and pay raise for her record of continued outstanding performance in serving the farmers of Morrow County. Mrs. Buschke is the lead program assistant in the local ASCS Office. David McLeod was recognized for his 16 years of service with the ASCS Office. Also attending were some 150 farmer-elected committeemen and county executive directors of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

Keynote speaker was Seeley Lodwick, Executive Assistant to the Administrator of ASCS from Washington, D.C. He noted that passage of the Agricultural Act of 1970, which gives farmers more freedom to make their own decisions was a bipartisan accomplishment which passed Congress by a greater margin than any other major agricultural bill in many years. He restated the four goals of the law: (1) Protect and improve farm income, (2) provide more flexibility for farmers, (3) develop greater reliance on the market place, and (4) balance supplies to demands of market place. He said that significant progress is being made toward all four goals.

Dale Helsper, Northwest Area Director of ASCS, also from Washington, D.C., recapped developments in the long dock strike. He said that during June to Sept. 1971, agricultural exports from the West Coast totaled only $37 million, compared with a whopping $288 million a year earlier when no strike interfered. Mr. Helsper then outlined steps being taken by USDA to encourage exports to new areas. These include:

Expanded trade with Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Opened negotiations that should lead to normal trade relations with Mainland China.

Opened negotiations with the European community to remove some of the barriers to trade there.

Special teams to Japan as well as Europe to regain some of our trade.

Acting now to keep trade moving by preventing strikes.

Encouraging exports through new tax incentives.

Other speakers from State and County ASCS offices and from OSU reported on various aspects of the local and statewide agricultural picture as they relate to administration of the farm programs. Dr. Lee Kolmer, Director of the Cooperative Extension Service at Oregon State University, gave a perspective of "Extension's Role in Rural Development."
