By Mary Lee Marlow

About 85 were present at the Morrow County Home-maker's Spring Festival held last Friday at the Greenfield Grange hall. Theme of the day was "P.I.E. In The Sky", the "P" standing for Power, Programs and Potential, the "I" for Irrigation and Industry, and the "E" for Education, Economy and Environment.

Registration and coffee hour preceded the welcome by Mayor Dewey West Jr. of Boardman, and the invocation by Pastor Neil King of the Boardman Community Church. Mrs. Nelson, Master of ceremonies, led in group singing, and introduced the special guests.

Bill the Builder

Bill Nelson of W.E. Nelson Co. building contractor at Boardman is an Oregonian. He grew up in Portland but has followed construction all over Oregon. He likes Eastern Oregon and Boardman in particular.

Since moving to Boardman he has built 15 houses. He just recently completed the Inland Empire Bank building. He has now under construction a two-story office building and country club house on the golf course. He will soon be starting on a building for Tower Land Co. next to Irrigation Rentals which he built as a warehouse for Boeing.

He is married to the former Elaine Strauss who teaches kindergarten at the A.C. Houghton School and keeps books for the company. They have two children at home and have two married who have children of their own.

When he has time, he says he likes to go fishing!

THE WALL-TO-WALL carpeting at the new bank in Boardman has the elegant look of wool, but is a commercial acrylic. Because of its use in a public building, it was chosen for its non-static characteristic. The lovely red goes with the dark barnwood oak paneling. The 84 oz. rubber padding adds to the luxury feel when you walk on it.

Denver Grigsby of The Boeing Company spoke on the Land Use Developments and showed pictures of what is planned for the 100,000 acres of desert land south of Boardman.

Dr. Ann Litchfield, extension assistant director from OSU at Corvallis spoke on the relationship of the OSU Extension Service with the extension program in the county.
