Use Igran early this fall and you'll even have a chance at cheatgrass.

We say a chance, because Igran® herbicide doesn't promise to be always as effective on cheat as it is on other weeds. Like henbit, gromwell, tarweed, dogfennel, purple mustard, chickweed, bedstraw and other problem weeds in wheat.

But if you get Igran on before cheat emerges, or at least while it's small, the chances of controlling it, or suppressing it enough to make a good crop, are darn good. Which is something none of the other wheat herbicides can offer.

Besides, it only costs a bushel or two more to have a chance at cheat. And you don't need much suppression to make that up.

Even if cheat isn't your problem, Igran can still give you better control of many of the weeds that are. Because you can apply it early, when weeds are small and easier to kill. And before they can compete for nutrients and moisture.

It's hard to believe how many bushels are lost just waiting to use post-emerge chemicals. But with Igran you don't have to wait.

See what a difference it makes to control weeds early. And see if the difference doesn't easily make up the bushel or two difference in the price of Igran.
