

Ione's Topic Club moves into fall projects

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Williamson of Aurora were Monday visitors at the Milton Mogan home. The men are cousins and Mr. Williamson formerly lived in Ione and attended school here. They were returning from Spokane where they had visited their daughter, a social worker.

At their monthly meeting, the Deaconesses of the Ione Church of Christ decided that they should encourage their people to be concerned for the needy people beyond this community.

Beside going to Pendleton and helping on the wards at EOSH there are many ways people can share right in their own homes. The hospital constantly needs bibs and pajama tops. These can be made or material donated to the Deaconesses who will be sewing some of these later in the year.

Also they do baking at the Hospital and need cake mixes. This month the Deaconesses are asking families to donate cake mixes which they will take to the hospital. These can be brought to the church kitchen prior to October 22 and they will be delivered to Pendleton.

THE "CHOOSING AND USING OF POTATOES" will be the October lesson topic for all Home Extension study groups in Umatilla and Morrow counties, reports Extension Home Economist Molly Saul.

This lesson will include information of the nutritional contribution of potatoes to the diet, and the use of potatoes in special diets such as low sodium, low cholesterol and reducing diets. How to wisely select and store potatoes will also be included. Potatoes will be prepared in a variety of interesting ways from appetizers to desserts.

Morrow County has become a major potato producing area during the past 6 years because of irrigation developments along the Columbia River.

Project leaders who will teach the lesson to study groups in the 2 county area recently received their training from Mrs. Saul. Assisting with the presentation of the lesson was Mrs. John Walchli, Hermiston, and Darrell Maxwell, Area Extension Potato Specialist, Oregon State University.

All interested homemakers are invited to participate in one of these study lessons. Extension membership is not required. Call your county Extension office 676-9642 for information concerning date, time and place of meetings.

Ione Pool Report

The Ione Swimming Pool has again passed the Oregon State Board of Health Inspection. The only suggestion was to immediately acquire a new gas mask. This matter has been taken care of.

Two other matters came up after the state inspector's visit. One is the snowiness of the concrete in the pool area immediately outside the doors of the dressing room. Temporary Measures were taken and were successful in preventing further accidents. Non-slip strips were laid down in the worst spots. The only problem of using this next year is that the strips are against the state law because they collect dirt and other foreign particles. They will not stick properly if removed often. The other problem was the wading pool's drain became plugged. This happened the last week of the season and no action has been taken to remedy this.

Have tried to prepare some statistics to show how the pool has been operating in the summer of 1972. A total of 93 season tickets was sold. Fifty-one of these were sold to elementary students, twenty-nine to high school students, two to adults, nine family tickets, and two were adjusted tickets. The money received from these came to a total of $583.36.

The average daily attendance which is counted from the combination of both sessions of the day was 191. The highest count was on the Community conference held in Sun River

Community Pride delegation to Sun River: Mary Pat McElligott-Ione, Karen Richards-Irrigon, Don Stangel-Agent, Jerry Gentry-Heppner, Phil Carlson-Ione Summer Community Pride Conference.

Morrow county 4-H members joined other young people from throughout the state for the second annual Oregon Community Pride conference held Sept. 24-26 at Sunriver. Community Pride sponsored by Standard Oil of California, provides incentives for youth to demonstrate that "they can cause great things to happen in working toward making their homes, communities and state a better place in which to live."

Representing Morrow county at the conference sponsored jointly by the OSU Extension Service and Standard Oil of California, were Phil Carlson and Mary Pat McElligott of Ione, Jerry Gentry of Heppner and Karen Richards of Irrigon. Mr. and Mrs. Chester Wilson of Irrigon and Don Stangel 4-H agent accompanied the youth.

Workshop sessions were developed around such topics as esthetic values in the community, opportunities in community development, teenage employment, recreation needs and how the Community Pride program relates to the Oregon 4-H Education Center near Salem. Keynote speaker for the conference was Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson, Redmond, member of the Oregon State Board of Higher Education. She spoke on "Youth's opportunity and Challenge."

Projects ranging from roadside clean-up to voter registration to summer camping programs received special recognition during the second annual 4-H Community Pride conference Sept. 24-26 at Sunriver.

The awards ceremony was one of the highlights of the conference which attracted 114 young people concerned with environmental improvement according to Duane Johnson, Oregon State University extension 4-H and youth specialist.

In all, 15 4-H Community Pride projects received special recognition plaques given by the oil company. Among those receiving the awards was the Irrigon Community 4-H Club for their work in landscaping around their new fire hall. Several other Morrow County Clubs had good Community Pride programs this last year.

The goal of the Community Pride Program is to make homes, communities, and state a better place to live. Before returning home each county delegation made tentative plans for projects for the coming year.

Everybody likes to be a leader and the 4-H program offers a wide range of leadership opportunities for both young and old, reports Don Stangel, Morrow County Extension Agent.

Key to the youth education program conducted by the Oregon State University Extension Service is the adult volunteer who works with boys and girls from 9 to 19. "Without the adult volunteer leader, we would not have been able to offer 4-H to the nearly 400 young people who actually participate in the county last year," Don points out.

The majority of adults involved in the program serve as leaders of 4-H clubs with six to 12 members. The clubs are organized around a single project area, such as clothing, and meet on a regular basis. Adults who cannot commit themselves to regular meetings can still serve as resource people to existing 4-H clubs, the agent says. The "visiting" expert can make valuable contribution to the total learning experience of the 4-H member.

The 4-H program also offers leadership roles to young people. Don points out. The Teen Leader Program, for high school age youth, allows the young man or woman to actually lead a club of younger 4-H members.

The Junior Leader program, open to junior and senior high school students, finds the 4-H member assisting the adult leader in conducting the club's activities. The 4-H leader actually serves as a teacher, but he's not completely on his own. The county extension staff are available to help and regular training sessions are held.

The 4-H leaders, through the Morrow County 4-H Leader's Association, assist with the overall conduct of the 4-H program. The leaders association offers 4-H volunteers a chance to help determine the local program and to make sure it is relevant to the needs and interests of the county.

Additional information about leadership opportunities in the 4-H program is available at the Morrow County extension office in Heppner (676-9642).

SPECIAL

Oregon's nearly 43,000 4-H members are living evidence that "4-H is for everyone no matter where they live," points out Don Stangel, Morrow County Extension Agent.

Started over 50 years ago as an action-oriented, education program primarily for rural youth, 4-H today draws its membership from major cities, suburbs and small towns as well as from farms.

Oregon pioneered the idea that 4-H should be open to boys and girls from 9 to 19, explains H. Joe Myers, assistant director for 4-H and youth, Oregon State University Extension Service.

4-H Offers Opportunity

Although the vast majority of Oregon's 4-H members belong to clubs of six to 12 members led by a volunteer adult leader, a large number also participates as individual members in areas where clubs are not available. Some are active in 4-H 12 months a year. Others participate in "short term" projects, in which the work may be completed in a shorter period of time, such as summer vacation, Don notes.

Over 50 different subjects are available to young people through the 4-H program ranging from horses to bicycles and clothing to leathercraft. There is one to fit the interests and needs of almost every young person.

Additional information about 4-H in Morrow County may be obtained from the county extension office in Heppner.
