First Year....Vocational Shop at Heppner High School

Present Conditions

Vo Ag students have their shop in the old combination shop building and furnace room at the Junior High. This is the step-child in the Heppner system, separated from the other high school facilities it's crowded, bleak, cold, students form in lines to use equipment, no storage space.

The need for a new vocational shop at Heppner High School has been evident for many years. A new vocational shop was included in the plans for the new high school that was constructed in 1964. However bids submitted exceeded the available funds and the shop facility was not constructed.

The current emphasis on vocational education by the Oregon State Department of Education makes the need for a new shop facility of immediate concern.

Present shop facilities are inadequate both in size and structure. The small wood-working shop restricts the number of students that can enroll in the class and the size of the projects that any one student can undertake.

There are presently 32 students enrolled in the four shop classes and it is believed that a more adequate facility would double the number of students enrolled. We also need to provide a broader vocational curriculum than currently exists. However, expansion of current vocational classes will not be possible until new and larger facilities are available.

The woodworking shop classes are currently housed in a small 24' by 30' cement room under the gym. A room of this size containing the necessary woodworking equipment does not leave adequate room for students to work on large shop projects. The room also presents a problem from a standpoint of safety as serious accidents can result from overcrowded conditions in a room filled with dangerous equipment. Another serious problem is the lack of ventilation and the inability to clear the wood dust from the air. Storage areas are almost non-existent and make it difficult to store materials and projects.

In a room 24x30 feet containing woodworking equipment does not leave adequate room for students to work on large shop projects. From the standpoint of safety, serious accidents can result from overcrowded conditions.

The shop classroom is also separated from the shop and makes it impossible for the instructor to provide supervision in both areas. It therefore becomes necessary to keep all students in the same location.

Vo Ag Bldg
The Vocational Agriculture students are housed in the old combination shop building and furnace room located adjacent to the Heppner Junior High Building. Aside from the total inadequacy of the facility, it does present several other problems. First, the building does not have a classroom so it is necessary to handle classroom work in a separate building. This type situation then requires that all students be in the classroom at the same time and in the shop area at the same time. Thus, there is no flexibility in having students working at different activities.

The second problem is that of transporting students from the high school building to the present shop facility. This results in additional expense but the major problem is loss of classroom time while students are on the bus. The proposed new shop facility would provide all vocational facilities in one building with classroom included.

The Heppner Band Parents have met with some response from their plea to get loaned band jackets returned to the high school.

President Corliss Boner has reported that one jacket, a small size, has been returned. There are still approximately 20 jackets still missing, and the club is urging anyone who might have borrowed a jacket and overlooked returning it please to do so to the high school.

Their request to get instruments loaned or donated to the school for students who do not have one of their own has also met with some response. One clarinet in good condition has been donated to the school's music department.

Public Invited To View Exhibit

An Art Exhibit, from the American National Red Cross, will be on display at Heppner High School's library for approximately two more weeks.

The Art Exhibit is being presented through the American National Red Cross' Inland Empire Chapter in Spokane, by the Morrow County Chapter. Dennis Toney, head of the Publications Dept. at HHS, is responsible for bringing the exhibit to Heppner.

The show features art work done by students of all different ages from all over the world. There is a color painting of a boat by a 14 year old girl from Thailand; a color abstract painting by a 15 year old boy from Okinawa; and an ink drawing of trees by a 17 year old boy from Virginia in the display. The students are all part of the International School Art Program. All of the art work is mounted on white tagboard and is marked clearly with details about the artist.

Heppner High School would encourage the public to see the art show before it has to be sent back. The library is open from 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Mildred Davidson's 4-H knitting club, the Knitty Knitters, will be sponsoring a food sale at Del's Market in Lexington, on Saturday, December 9 from 10:00 a.m. until everything is sold.

All proceeds will go to the Robin Petrik fund.

Boy Scouts on Winter Outing

Thirty Boy Scouts from Heppner along with two troupes from Hermiston and one from Echo, to make a total of 100 Scouts, enjoyed a weekend winter camp at Bull Prairie last weekend.

Scoutmaster Herman Winter and others set up tents on Thursday. It was a beautiful day...and then came the early snowfall. The boys, undaunted by the change in weather, earned merit badges. The Heppner boys earned their cooking skills and Hermiston and Echo hiking and camping.

Brian Thompson had the misfortune to step on an upturned garden rake. He was brought back into town for treatment.

The boys worked towards their skill awards. They took instruction in First Aid, Cooking, Axe and Knife and Hiking.

They gained a lot of experience in preparing their own meals in patrols. They learned the amount of bedding that is needed for winter camping.

Adults going from Heppner were Len Ray Schwarz, Herman Winter, Del Piper, John Gochnauer and Glen Ward.

Proposed Solution

The floor plan shows the proposed Vocational Building that would be constructed 70 feet out from the cafeteria wing of the High School.

Plans call for a savings as well as a valuable work experience in the interior construction of the new facility. The students in this department will work under supervision at finishing the construction.

The board felt an urgency to get on with the construction of this facility. If the serial levy passes, it is hoped that students will move into the new facility Dec. - January of next school year.
