

Various Garden Clubs in Morrow County have recently presented resource books entitled "People and Their Environment" to school principals and librarians of the different schools.

Purchase of the environmental books for schools is a project of the National Council of Garden Clubs and was spearheaded locally by Mrs. Fred Martin of the Lone Garden Club. The Heppner, Lone and Boardman Garden Clubs participated in the project with each club responsible for the purchase of books for the schools in their community.

The total series of environmental books contains eight volumes and covers grades one through 12. The total cost of the 28 volumes purchased reflects an expenditure of $95.20 for the Garden Clubs.

The books will be used as resource material to provide ideas and information for classroom teachers when teaching units on environmental control. Ron Daniels, District Superintendent, said that sample copies of the books were distributed to classroom teachers last year for their review and evaluation. The evaluation of the books was very favorable, with the classroom teachers indicating that they felt the books would be very helpful in providing resource material in the teaching of environmental control.

The Garden Clubs purchased the books early this school year and are already receiving wide use in the district classrooms.

Mrs. Daniels said that the school district was very appreciative of the efforts of the local Garden Clubs and he felt the books would be very useful to the classroom teachers.

Heppner High School's librarian, Mrs. Madge Thomson, received books on environmental control from Rev. Ed Cutting.

Mrs. Fred Martin made the book presentation on behalf of the Lone Garden Club to John Edmondson, principal of the lone schools.

Rev. Ed Cutting, president of the Heppner Garden Club, presents the conservation guide "People and Their Environment" to Dorcas Stewart, librarian at Heppner Elementary school.

4-H Leaders Conference Set in Salem

The State 4-H Leaders Conference, always a highlight of the leaders year, promises to be even more informative this year due to changes and programming.

Location of the conference this year is Salem, and dates coincide with those of the Oregon 4-H Conference. Leaders will have an opportunity to tour the new 4-H Center, enjoy a banquet with Oregon legislators and delegates to the "Know Your State Government Conference", attend informative sessions by project interest, as well as learn much more about what's going on in 4-H statewide.

All leaders are encouraged to consider attending the conference January 28-30. Housing will be available in dormitories and expenses will amount to only about $16 per leader this year. Birdine Tullis, Extension Aide, will accompany the Morrow County leaders to the conference. Call 676-9642 now and say "I'm going..." I want to know more about Oregon 4-H!

TERRY HUGHES left Tuesday to return to the University of Oregon. He worked for his Dad while he was here at M & R Co. He visited his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Terrel Benge and his parents, Matt Hughes and Joan Hughes.

Mrs. Effie Munkers was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Hopper for New Years dinner.

Susie French visited her grandmother, Nettie Denton, in Salem last week.

With a dime you can:

- buy one candy bar,
- buy a small soft drink,
- grind a ton of feed and auger it into a feed bunk.

A dime will still do a whale of a job . . . electrically. Electric power is a bargain . . . there's just no doubt about it.

A nickel's worth of it gives you two weeks of vacuuming. A quarter's worth toasts your toast for three months.

And because electricity is so reasonably priced, people are using it like they never have before. That's why we're planning now for increased loads. So that whenever you need electric power, we'll just ask, "Where?"
