

Old World Furniture Made in Heppner

A close up of one of the end tables shows the massive legs and the irregularity of the dowels that are a part of the charm of the Old World furniture now being made in Heppner.

Old World Craftsmanship is the style of furniture that is being made right here in Heppner. Willow Creek Cabinet shop is making this new handcrafted furniture from planks from a barn built in 1898. "This old wood is solid and heavy and is better than the new wood" says Jim Carr who owns and operates the Cabinet shop. The coffee tables and matching end tables are burned to give a black look and then coated with clear factory varnish. The massive legs have been turned and each piece of furniture is put together with solid hardwood dowels.

Their outlet in Pendleton will take as many tables as they can make. The set of three tables sells for just under $300.

Parsons Tables
For a change of pace they may make a few parsons tables. This piece of modern furniture is made from new suede formica in bright, bright colors. These are custom made as they receive orders from stores or from customers.

"Today we finished this one", as Jim went on to explain they had made it bright orange and blue to pick out the colors of a painting for a particular customer.

They make picture frames, gun cabinets, family room bars as well as the traditional cabinetry.

Jim and Joy Carr moved up from Portland about three years ago. They had visited in the county and liked the area and the people and decided to move up. They came to Heppner from Ione last fall and operate in the old REA building now owned by Herman Winter. Jim has always been building.

He is assisted by Mrs. Carr's brother, Bob Stickney. Bob was handy in school, did construction while he was in the SeaBees and has had on-the-job-training from Jim. He worked with Jim on the remodeling of the old hotel at Ione where he now lives with his new bride, the former Dianne Mills.

Jim and Joy have a mountain place above Anson Wright Park where they hope to spend the winter.

Irrigonites Roused by False Alarm

By FRANCES ROSE WILSON

Irrigon residents were aroused at 4:45 a.m. Sat. morning, with a fire alarm which proved to be false. There was a power outage simultaneously with the alarm and a number of people said their telephone sounded with short rings when the power went off.

A spokesman for the Umatilla Electric Co-op stated that in cold weather the power lines will tighten and that a splice in a line had let go, causing the outage. It must have caused a jolt that set off the fire alarm. The power was off on Oregon Ave. where the City well and pumps are located, causing Mayor Chester Wilson some concern. Service was restored to the area at 6:45 a.m.

New Baby

Mrs. Felix Friend of Irrigon spent the last week in Pendleton to welcome a new granddaughter, Lacey, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael LaFran of Pendleton. She was born Dec. 30, at the Good Shepherd Hospital in Hermiston and weighed 6 pounds 11 ounces.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Shade and family of Pendleton were recent visitors at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Shade in Irrigon.
