Co-op News

C.F.C. Changes Loan Procedures

Columbia Basin Electric Co-op has received notice of changes in the loan procedures of their own financing organization, National Rural Utilities Cooperative Finance Corporation, known as C.F.C. Manager, David Harrison, states that Columbia Basin has invested $93,911.00, over three years, in C.F.C. toward seed capital. It will be required to continue investing funds annually for the next 12 years. A new formula for the annual contributions has been established. They will require 1.2 percent of the annual operating revenues with a deduction of the average power cost nationally for Rural Electric Coops. Last year the average was 4.4 percent. Formerly a straight 40 percent average power cost deduction was utilized.

On new loans from C.F.C. the period of the loan was 35 years. It may now vary from 20 years to 35 years.

C.F.C. was set up four years ago by the R.E.C.'s to help supplement R.E.A. (Rural Electrification Administration) loans for additional funds needed by local Rural Electric Co-ops.

Columbia Basin received 10 percent of the last loan from C.F.C. at 7.5 percent interest. The REA portion of the last loan was at 2 percent. The next loan would have been at 20 percent C.F.C. financing. Under the C.F.C. plan, many R.E.C.'s had 30 percent C.F.C. financing. For those Rural Electrics in very dense population areas and high revenue areas only C.F.C. financing was available, and no REA financing available to them.

According to Dave Harrison, local R.E.C. manager, it is not known what the effect of the recent action of the Administration in eliminating REA loans will be on the comparatively small amount of C.F.C. funds available.
