Barton Clarks Home from Japan

Mr. and Mrs. Barton Clark are home from an Oregon Grange 12-day tour to Japan. The chartered Boeing 707 flew at 39,000 feet, 700 miles an hour in temperatures 95 degrees below zero. Mr. and Mrs. Art Allen of Boardman also made the trip.

This was the Clarks first time to Japan. What do you see in Japan? Shrines and shrines and more shrines. They visited factories and the site of the Olympic Games. They passed by Mt. Fuji three times but were unable to see it due to smog. They rode the Bullet Train at 120 miles an hour. The amazing thing about the train, Bart said was that it was on time. They stop just two minutes to let people off and on. Their 179 member group were told not to look for a place to sit when they go on but keep right on going so that everyone could get on. No one was ever left behind. They rode 300 miles in 3 hours and stopped at one station and slowed down a little bit for towns.

Rice Fields
Bart was real interested in seeing their rice plots which were the size of front yards and the equipment they used to cultivate them. In Tokyo Tower like the Eiffel Tower, he saw a rice combine. It had two little forks, little screens and a little sacking spout. It was very little larger than a riding lawn mower. It was gas powered. Their plots were plowed and cultivated by machines similar to our roto-tillers.

No Parking
There's no parking downtown in the big cities. People ride into town on buses, the subway and the trains. The world famous mono-rail brings people into town from the airport. Tokyo is an easy town to get around in as the signs are written in English too.

Bart says he sees a change shaping up in their manufacturing. The wage scale is going up and their advantage in production will be less. Instead of granting pay increases, workers are given bonus. Sometimes equal to 8 months salary. He said that people on the street dress better than those seen on the city streets in America. They have had long hair but it is on the way out. Their streets are safe with crime apparently at a low level.

Food
They enjoyed a wide variety of foods but the orders were in very small amounts. Pastries were excellent. Bread, coffee and desserts were extra. Coffee was 180 yens or 60 cents a cup. There was no tipping as it is known here. It was added to the check 10 percent tipping and another 10 percent tax.

They toured a Noritake factory and watched the china being made from clay to the finished product. Their Japanese guide could not enter the factory.

Another custom that was difficult to accustom themselves to was that of co-educational rest rooms. These public toilet rooms were at all shrines. They were one large room with facilities lining the walls. These were for the most part "filthy". They are in constant use.

However the hotel rooms were immaculate and modern. Standard accessories in the rooms were two tooth brushes, and two tubes of tooth paste, two razors and two kimonos.

American movies were being shown. Bart said it gave him a funny feeling to see Steve McQueen talking in Japanese. They went on a night tour of the city, and had a sukiyaki dinner served by Geisha girls.

He found that the school children take English from the 3rd grade. In many cases when communication can't be accomplished by speaking, writing will make it easier. Two young Japanese men, approached two members of their tour and asked if they could take them to dinner just to practice their English on them. Mrs. Clark celebrated her birthday over there. The birthday dinner, a Chinese dinner cost 2500 yens. Members of the tour purchased very few radios, cameras, china and other souvenir items because they found they could get them as cheap or cheaper in the United States.

Only at one time was there a mention of World War II. Some one was asked if they saw Hiroshima to which they replied "No but I saw Pearl Harbor".
