"Today is a New Day" and then Gertrude Snodgrass, guest speaker at the Soroptimists second annual Senior Girls luncheon talked succinctly on the seven thoughts she has as her own philosophy...and I will be happy. I will seek beauty inwardly. I will be ME, I will not wear a mask. I will be genuinely involved. I will dream my dream and I will not be afraid. A few of the meaningful thoughts: "Why am I afraid to tell you who I am". Be brave enough to open yourself to other people. I look back 50 years and you look forward 50 years. I will try to live this day only. Begin here and now.

She noted three ways to solve a problem. Leave it for awhile. When you return to it it may not be as important as it seemed, you've found a new approach or it's taken care of itself.

People are as happy as they make up their minds to be. A person has all these feelings and emotions—if he learns to live with them he isn't swept into oblivion. We learn more from non-verbal behaviour than from verbal. I must give of myself—make things happen rather than just watch them happen.

Inward beauty begins with self awareness. "We must be our own change agent. You're the only person who can change you". "Don't be all sugar and spice and Junior Prom". It's a frightening freedom, being yourself. Be a responsible self-directing person, dare to open your feelings, and live by your values.

What happens when you don't find your identity? Sometimes it torments man more than he can bear. In order to know others, we must know ourselves.

In closing, she said, "A thank you to the good Lord for placing me in a position to work with students and to know you."

Mrs. Snodgrass is supervisor of Teacher Training at Eastern Oregon College. She also teaches English.
