Musical Melodrama Excites Children

By JUSTINE WEATHERFORD

Squeals of delight, screams of fright, and lots of warm excitement filled the multipurpose room at Heppner Elementary School last Wednesday afternoon as the lively drama group from Eastern Oregon College presented OLD KING COLE. They had given a make-up demonstration and similar performance at Ione the same morning.

The two-act musical was jointly written by lyricist Grenzbach and musician Bergh. Two pianos carried the musical accompaniment. The collegiate performers have now appeared at Wallowa, Enterprise, Hermiston, Umatilla, Ione and Heppner and are expecting to perform at Ukiah, Cove, Union, Imbler, Elgin and La Grande. The groups' tour is sponsored by the La Grande Branch of A.A.U.W.

The Plot Percolates

With much pomp and circumstance the royal court of the kingdom of An dealt with a great problem. The villain Grench somehow managed to lock the sun in his magic box which could only be opened by the singing of a very special song. A young hero, Nick from Nowhere, arrived and after getting to know the royal court and the great court jester - prime minister was able in time to help villain Grench get the box open.

All the court were lively actors. The royal family - King Cole, his queen and their beautiful princess acted and sang delightfully. The three agile young men who were the court jester prime minister, the villain Grench, and the hero Nick carried their parts convincingly. Grench jumped in and out of the audience and was the object of a "Catch him, Stop him!" dash through the rows of seated students that really provoked lots of screaming.

Just Right Ending

It all ended just right. The sun shone again. Grench and Nick were rewarded by King Cole. Grench was promoted to court jester, and Nick won the hand of the lovely princess. The grand finale had the entire cast joining in singing "You Can Do Anything You Really Believe You Can Do".
