A doctor obliged a fisherman friend one day by giving him the use of his inner office scales to weigh his catch. Emerging from the examining room with the man and his 25-pound fish, the doctor found his previously empty waiting room occupied by several patients who eyed the fish - and him - with questioning stares.

The doctor smiled and nodded to them. Then with a pat on the man's shoulder, he advised encouragingly, "Now if he isn't feeling better tomorrow, you bring him back."
