55 Years Ago.....1918

Forty-seven young men of Morrow County who have attained the age of twenty-one years since the first registration one year ago, registered with the Morrow County draft board Monday. According to the estimates made by Provost Marshal General Crowder, Morrow County fell short.

Representatives from eight grain growing counties of Oregon and two from Washington gathered in Pendleton last Monday and came to an agreement on a wage scale for farm labor in the harvesting of the 1918 crop.

The merchants in nearly every county in Oregon have agreed to sell no flour, except in emergency cases and on permits, until after harvest. What shall we do about it in Morrow County? Those who have flour which they wish to turn back should deliver it to some retail dealer in the very near future.

Those of us who ride in automobiles, and that means nearly everyone, are particularly interested in good roads, especially those that are smooth. Extensive tests recently completed in the laboratories of the Standard Oil Co. have opened the probability of a bright future of bumpless roads. In the past, oiled roads have had a decided tendency to break down in places and become very uneven after a short time. The trouble was that earlier road oils contained only a percentage of asphaltum, tests revealed.

Data showing the vital need for wells, dams, reservoirs, and other water projects that will greatly increase the value of vast areas of range land in eastern Oregon will be included in the water resources survey now under way in Oregon, it was announced by Ormond R. Bean, chairman of the Oregon State planning boards.

Morrow County's appointment of federal and state road money will be placed on the Heppner-Condon and Heppner-Spray roads if recommendation of the county court made before the state highway commission at Pendleton last evening is complied with.

Faces of local World War veterans beamed as they opened the Wednesday morning mail. It contained notice that the bonds had arrived in payment of the balance due on their adjusted compensation certificates for services rendered.

Miss Genevieve Hanna, Lena grange candidate, with 3100 votes, led the voting Saturday night at the first of the Rodeo queen dances.

Freezing affords one of the simplest methods of preserving foods, and with the rapid expansion of cold storage facilities available to the public, much interest has been developed recently in methods of processing berries, vegetables and fruits for this purpose.

Gifts from Oregon citizens, organizations, foundations and federal government grants made to the University of Oregon totaled more than $500,000 during the year just passed. Many of the donations were in the form of cash, while others were gifts of books and other materials.
