LEXINGTON TOPS VERY ACTIVE

Lexington TOPS Club chose a co-leader this week, Karen Springer, who will work with leader Mary D. Doherty. Karen was president of the Heppner TOPS Club before she recently moved to Lexington.

Charlene Papineau and Karen Springer have assumed responsibility as co-activity chairman for the club. A three-month contest which will end on Sept. 10, offers the best weight loser a $5 gift certificate.

During the summer months this group has been meeting at 9:30 a.m. on Mondays, but in September it will return to Monday afternoon meeting times.

Cousins meet after 36 years

Cousins who had not seen each other for the past 36 years were re-united in Lexington last week when Mr. and Mrs. Arvine Hoxie, Manistee, Mich., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Leo J. Russell Sr., Lexington.

The Russells came to Lexington about a year ago from Westport and settled in the old Brock house northwest of town.

The Hoxies left Lexington in 1937 on a drive to Los Angeles, and then planned to tour the East.

Upon their arrival in Michigan they purchased and operated a motel. Recently they sold the motel and decided to visit Oregon, seeking out their cousin of Mr. Russell.

Rhea Grangers meet Sunday

Rhea Creek Grangers and friends will gather at Anson Wright Memorial Park on Sunday, Aug. 12, at 12:30 p.m., for their annual picnic.

It will be potluck with everyone to bring his own table service. With the harvest season drawing to a close, there is time for farmers and their friends to get together for a visit.

The yellow jackets are a real problem in the mountains this summer, so come prepared to protect yourself, reports Mrs. Barton Clark.

Along Butter Creek

Sue Vinson and Helen Currin, neighbors on each side of the Gerald Swaggarts, organized a farewell party for other neighbors and friends of Violet and Gerald Sat. evening, Aug. and Gerald Saturday, evening, Aug. 4. The women brought choice cakes which were served with five flavors of Heppner's Pride of Oregon ice cream and other refreshments.

The Friday morning fire up at Anderson Camp drew most of the ranchers' attention. The hilltop location, where there is almost always a breeze, caused concern about the fire's spreading. The Currins, Brosnans and others felt fortunate not to suffer losses.

Something unusual in living-room furnishings: Tom Currin has been reworking his airplane. After many coats of careful repainting the two wings are "furnishing" the livingroom of the old home on the ranch. He hopes to get the various parts reassembled when the rush of ranch work slows.

The Jerry Myers family has enjoyed having the visiting Japanese student, Yuji Baba, stay in their home several weeks.

HIGH WINDS CAUSE FIRE AT KNIZUA

A fire, believed started by the wind, was reported Sunday afternoon, Aug. 5, at Kinzua Corporation.

The fire, although a 'hot one,' did no damage to the mill and property or the machinery.

Two units of the Heppner Volunteer Fire Department responded to the call.

There are times you don't care what it costs.

But hospitals care. All the time.

When it comes to saving a life, or even fixing a broken arm, you want your family to have the finest health care money can buy. And hospitals are deeply committed to giving you that kind of care. Wherever and whenever you need it. But they are going one step further. They are also working to save you money by controlling their own rising costs.

It isn't easy, but headway is being made.

At least 11 Oregon hospitals, for example, have gotten together with other institutions to share such high cost facilities as computers and cobalt treatment machines. Five others recently began saving about $500,000 a year by building a cooperative laundry. Others have joint management services. Almost all are involved in a group purchasing plan.

One hospital saw a 35 percent saving by rescheduling and reorganizing their personnel operations. In another, a study led to an expanded out-patient department and Day Care unit that cuts overnight stays and reduces patient costs one-half to one-third. Another hospital credits a new employee incentive plan with eliminating an expected budget overrun.

Blue Cross of Oregon applauds efforts like these. And we're doing all we can to help. Like providing manpower and statistical backup to help set common standard for quality care. Supplying the people and the money to assist with long range planning for community health needs. Giving financial and directional support for management studies. Assisting hospitals and other groups investigate alternative health care delivery systems. We are also working on new reimbursement systems to meet hospitals' financial needs and fulfill their accountability to you.

We realize it's going to take a concerted effort on a lot of different fronts by a lot of different people to do the job that needs to be done.

But we just want you to know. People are working. And caring.
