Potato sheds for Port areas

Boardman—The Port of Morrow has agreed to sell 7.9 acres of land near its food processing park to Boardman potato grower John Prag. Prag grows about 400 acres of spuds near Boardman and produces seed potatoes at Joseph.

Rupert Kennedy, port manager, said the land sold to Prag will be used as the site for five potato storage sheds. He said Prag plans to build one shed a year for the next five years.

The commission also asked for certification of four wells at the food processing park to be used for processing water by plants expected to locate on the port property.

The port awarded a $3,488 contract to Hager Construction Company for a pump house over a port well. The insulated building is 20 by 26 feet.

The port is expecting an answer in October from the Rural Area Development Administration on its application for a loan and grant of approximately $972,800 for site development work in the port's 350-acre food processing park along the Columbia River.

The port has applied for a 20-year loan for $632,600 for a disposal system to carry effluent from food processing plants to the land. A grant of $340,200 would be used for a water and fire protection system, road leveling and site preparation, according to Kennedy.

Kennedy also told the commission in its last meeting that the development could mean that the Port of Morrow would have one of the finest food processing parks in the Pacific Northwest.

Visiting Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Samples Saturday evening was Mr. and Mrs. Gary Stumper from Vancouver, Wn.
