Two new uses for zucchini

One of the easiest vegetables for any gardener to grow is the zucchini squash. Any cook can slice the squash and boil it and serve it salted, peppered and well buttered. Those who like to really create special treats with zucchini might try these two recipes by Mrs. Jerry Brosnan of Butter Creek.

ZUCCHINI BREAD:

Cream 1/2 cup oil or 1 cube margarine with 1 cup white sugar. Add 2 beaten eggs and 1 1/2 tsp. vanilla to above mixture. Sift together 1 1/2 cups whole wheat, white or graham flour with 1/2 tsp. salt, 3/4 tsp. baking powder, 1/2 tsp. soda, 1 tsp. cinnamon. Stir into first mixture. Then add 1/2 cup raisins, 1/2 cup chopped walnuts and 1 cup grated zucchini. Grease 5 x 9 loaf pan and bake 1 hour at 325 degrees.

ZUCCHINI BEEF BAKE:

4 small zucchini
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 1/2 cups soft bread crumbs
4 tbs. butter
1/4 cup flour
1 5-oz. jar processed cheese, spread with hickory smoke flavor
1 tbs. melted butter
1 lb. ground beef
1/2 tsp. salt, 1/4 tsp. thyme, 1/2 tsp. salt, and pepper
2 cups milk

Cut zucchini in 1/2 inch slices. Cook in boiling water for 4 min. Drain. Brown meat and onions and drain. Stir in 1/2 cup bread crumbs, 1/4 tsp. salt, thyme pepper. Remove from heat. In saucepan melt 4 tbs. butter, blend in flour and remaining salt and milk all at once. Cook and stir until thick. Add cheese, stirring until melted. Stir in meat mixture and squash. Combine rest of bread crumbs with 1 tbs. butter and sprinkle on top just before baking. Bake 35 min. at 350. Serves 6.

Whisky, romance in the Highlands

By

JUSTINE WEATHERFORD

Some information on the sport of falconry and interesting details about the distilling of clear barley whiskey are skillfully woven into the new novel, A FALCON FOR A QUEEN, by British author Catherine Gaskin.

Florence Green chose this story of the historic, romantic Scottish highlands to review for the Bookworm Club at its second fall meeting, Sept. 24, at the George Curran home on Butter Creek.

"No novel so arresting since REBECCA," reports the Dispatch of Columbus, Ohio. "This is indeed an outstanding novel with unusual details to be long-remembered," states the Associated Press. Because of its selection by the Literary Guild and the Doubleday Book Club and its publication in the Readers Digest Condensed Books, this tale is an established bestseller.

During one summer toward the end of Victoria's reign orphaned Kirsty Howard moved from her missionary background centered in Peking, China, where her father, an Anglican bishop, had recently been buried, into her maternal grandfather Angus Macdonald's distillery-centered domain in the rugged highlands near remote Ballinalach, beyond Inverness.

Although summer gave most of Cluain's whiskey making workers outside occupation and life around the warehouses and distillery was quieter then, Kirsty soon met unusual people and explored unusual places. She was concerned with uncovering details of her only brother's death as the result of a hunting accident the previous summer.

Stern Grandfather Macdonald had doted on his only grandson, William Howard, but warmed very slowly to this "gurri." He lived in a feudal-like atmosphere and was addressed as "Master" by his household staff, stable workers, and cottage-housed distillery and farm employees.

Kirsty was fascinated by the distillery foreman, a falcon-loving deviate, Callum Sinclair. She met the Campbells of neighboring Ballachorra and learned of ancient clan struggles. Bit by bit she fit pieces together of the story of her brother's last days.

Novelist Gaskin grips her reader's attention until the last page. The tempo of events increases rapidly during the autumn and as the barley is harvested builds to a startling climax in late September when the fall rains come. The "gurri" Kirsty is tested by cruel circumstances. Tragedy is historically commonplace in the highlands.

In a four-page epilogue, Catherine Gaskin quickly carries the reader beyond Victoria's death and the crowning of Edward VII, through World War I, and into the contemporary era. The really exciting and informative novel closes with this line, "Perhaps we learned, at last, the true meaning of the Cawdor motto BE MINDFUL."

The edition used by Reviewer Mrs. Green is a Fawcett paperback printed in the U.S. in 1937, $1.25.

Breath for Life campaign ends, successfully

The Breath for Life campaign has been completed in the Heppner area.

Mrs. Riley Munkers, chairman, reported that $399.96 had been collected in donations in the Heppner area, and was pleased with the response as this was the first time it has been held in this area.
