Teenagers attend meet

Teenagers and the law, pre-marital relationships and family patterns, childbirth, and mental and sexual problems were topics discussed by more than 100 Morrow County seniors during the second annual Youth Conference on Responsible Adulthood held last week at the Methodist Church in Heppner and in the Boardman Grange Hall, Boardman.

The conference was sponsored by the Morrow County Juvenile Advisory Committee and the Oregon State Board of Health.

Juniors and seniors from Heppner, Ione and Riverside high schools attended four out six sessions on responsible adulthood. Earlier in the school year, these students chose six topics to be discussed in the conference. Each participant received parental permission before attending the day-long session.

The six sessions were led by resource people from the community and from state agencies. The topics and leaders included: Pre-marital relationships and family patterns, led by ministers William Arthur, Ione, and Edwin Cutting, Heppner; teenagers and law, Dennis Doherty, Heppner, assistant district attorney, and Corporal Hanzell of the Oregon State Police; mental health for young adults, Dave Mitchum, Morrow County Mental Health Service program director; mental and sexual problems, Dr. Sal Laurie of the Umatilla and Morrow County Mental Health Clinic; responsible parenthood, led by Claudia Webster, of the Oregon State Board of Health; and childbirth, Edyth Connolly, also of the Oregon State Board of Health.

"The two conferences almost doubled last year's attendance," Carolyn Davis, Morrow County Juvenile Director, noted.

"I saw a great improvement over last year by the students' enthusiasm in participating in this program."

Clark heads Grange

Barton Clark was elected Master of Pomona Grange Saturday.

Also elected for 1974-75 were Bryce Keene, overseer; Kenneth Smouse, steward; Nathan Thorpe, assistant steward; Pearl Wright, chaplain; Charles C. Jones, treasurer; Irene Dalzell, secretary; Art Dalzell, gatekeeper; Mary Lee Marlow, Ceres; Hazel Carpenter, Pomona; Delpha Jones, Flora; Frances Smouse, lady assistant steward; Archie Becholt, Anna Warren and Mary Lindsay, executive board members.

The visitation count for Pomona was announced by the lecturer, Mrs. Graves, as a tie between Greenfield and Rhea Creek. Duplicate prizes will be awarded.

Installation of Pomona and subordinate officers was planned for Lexington Grange on Dec. 9, with installation at 1:30 p.m. followed by a potluck dinner.

Introduced were Bob Coble, state deputy, Berl Akers, state grange gatekeeper, and Joe Dupuis of Stanfield Grange

Education can also be fun and games

A car race and an egg toss are not usually associated with junior high school science curriculum, unless the classes are instructed by Inez Meador.

Mrs. Meador, Heppner 7th and 8th grade teacher, challenges her students with thought-provoking projects that are fun as well as educational.

The car race, dubbed "Carwirubbi Derby" by the 7th grade participants, will be staged Tuesday, Nov. 6, in the grade school multi-purpose room at 9:30 a.m.

Although the cars may be any size, the only materials allowed in construction are cardboard, wire coat hangers, string, glue and two No. 32 rubber bands.

Entrants will be exposed to practical application of friction, balance and propulsion in order to design a winning vehicle.

"Project Omelet" will be launched at the rodeo grounds the same day, at 1 p.m.

Eighth graders will attempt to loft a raw egg over a barrel 20 feet high, landing it without breaking. The egg may be propelled by any means other than muscle power, such as helium balloons, catapults or rockets. Packaging is unlimited.

If this feat sounds a little dubious, Mrs. Meador reported a former class dropped raw eggs, packaged in various ways, from an airplane with 51 per cent success.

Tuesday's spectacles are open to the public.

Group holds dinner

A spaghetti dinner prepared by members was served at the Oct. 23 Mother's Club meeting at the Nazarene Church.

Prospective members, Linda Johnson and Jean Howell, both of Heppner, were guests at the evening social.

The Nov. 5 meeting will be held at the Nancy Brownfield home at 8 p.m. Dave Harrison, Columbia Basin Electric Co. manager, will speak on the energy crisis.

Mrs. Lee Pettyjohn prepared the Ione club entry in the district show of arrangements. She called it "Bull in a China Closet."

Festival actors to appear here Nov. 2

The work of "Poets and Players" will be combined to create the special magic of theatre for the Heppner community at Heppner High School Friday, Nov. 2, at 7:30 p.m.

Actresses Mary Turner and Margaret Rubin from the Oregon Shakespearean Festival in Ashland will present a potpourri of scenes and readings from the works of Shakespeare and his contemporaries, as well as modern American writers.

The program is a new facet of the festival's education project, which sends teams of actors into high school classrooms to assist teachers in illustrating the difference between reading dramatic literature and seeing and hearing it performed.

"We want to give adults in the community, particularly parents, a chance to see what we do in the classroom," explained Festival Education Coordinator Margaret Rubin.

"We hope it will encourage parents to bring their youngsters to this family theatre in Ashland and to support the school's efforts to bring students to plays at the festival."

Mary Turner is a veteran of four festival seasons. She has also acted with the Pacific Conservatory of the Performing Arts, Salem's Pentacle Theatre and the Albany Little Theatre.

A community-type potluck dinner will be held at 6 p.m. Friday at the high school cafeteria. It is being held just before the performance in order to allow Heppner residents to eat dinner and visit with the professional actors.

Each person attending the potluck is asked to bring a food dish and his own table service.

Lindstroms spend six weeks abroad

Mr. and Mrs. Roy W. Lindstrom have returned from a six-week vacation that took them to England, France, Italy, Greece and Spain.

Their daughter, Susan, accompanied them for part of the trip.

The three took in most of the usual sight-seeing attractions of London, Westminster Abbey, Tower of London and the crown jewels, Piccadilly Circus and Buckingham Palace.

They attended a stage play, "Gypsy," starring Angela Lansbury. One of the features of the theatre was coin-operated opera glasses. Katherine said, "the glasses worked very well, after she enlisted the aid of a Londoner to figure out just which English coin was required to get them into operation."

Roy visited with Les Madden, who was in London attending Vidal Sassoon School of Beauty.

Paris was another round of sightseeing, Eiffel Tower, Louvre, Notre Dame Cathedral, sidewalk cafes, and other attractions. The thing that was most noticeable to the Ionians was the great number of people who were traveling.

Italy was experiencing a cholera epidemic while the Lindstroms were there. In some areas, they never got off their bus. In Naples, they confirmed that much laundry is hung to dry between the buildings. The "flags" of Naples were flying the day they visited there. Roy kept looking for tractors, but reported most of the farm work is still done with draft animals, horses, mules, donkeys, and in one case oxen.

Katherine said, "We went to the Vatican, us and 50 million other people. You can't believe the crowd." She was impressed with the statuary, especially the Pieta, which is now restored and behind protective glass.

Susan left her parents at Athens and returned to her home in San Francisco. Mr. and Mrs. Lindstrom took a boat tour of the Grecian Islands, Crete, and Rhodes, and also Turkey. Ephesus was termed the highlight of the trip. Katherine expressed her desire to return to that particular area. They visited the tomb of St. John but time did not permit them to visit the tomb of Mary. While in Greece, the Lindstroms were able to spend two days with Monica Circle from Roseburg, an IFYE student in Greece.

It was Columbus Day when the Lindstroms arrived in Madrid. It was a time of celebration with bull fights and pageantry. Toledo, Spain, was a town that interested the travelers. It is an old walled fortress city that dates back to the 1st Century. It was also the adopted home of El Greco, the famous painter. In a little wayside church the Lindstroms visited, there were three El Greco paintings on the wall and the altar was "made from silver from the colony of America," according to the nun guiding the tourists.

The Lindstroms remember Madrid well because the Spanish health officials required them to take cholera shots. They had been informed that cholera vaccinations were not necessary, but found the Spanish government felt differently.

New York was the first stop after leaving Madrid. Then to Los Angeles and Palm Springs where they visited Roy's sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Mortensen. Susan joined her parents again in San Francisco and the three went to Tacoma to visit Christina, who is attending Pacific Lutheran University. The group watched PLU defeat College of Idaho in a football game.

Susan flew to San Francisco Monday and Mr. and Mrs. Lindstrom returned to Ione Oct. 23.
