

Elks leadership winners named

Kristi Haguewood and Greg Davidson, two Heppner High School seniors, are the 1973-74 winners of the Heppner Elks Leadership Contest.

This contest recognizes and rewards youth leaders, both boys and girls, who are high school juniors and seniors. They type of boy and girl, who by reason of their conduct, ability and actions, are looked up to for guidance, counsel and leadership. These students are recognized by their classmates, teachers, clergymen, coaches, parents and citizens as leaders.

Each applicant entered a brochure of required facts which includes a summary of activity accomplishments, objectives in promoting the welfare of the youth of the community, and a letter from a parent or other person presenting a picture of the family situation.

Newspaper clippings and photographs were included with a letter of endorsement from a responsible person who has observed the applicant. The letter attests to the applicant's character, industry, purposefulness, disposition and general worthiness.

Judging is based 40 per cent on leadership; 20 per cent, citizenship appreciation; 20 per cent perseverance, resourcefulness and sense of honor; 10 per cent, neatness and arrangement of brochure; and 10 per cent, compliance with instructions.

Both winners will be awarded $100.

Clint Agee, chairman of the contest for the local Elks Lodge, reported that the winners brochures have been entered in district competition.

First place winners at district receive $100 and their brochures are forward to state competition. The boy and girl first place winners at the state level receive $750 each and $600 each for second. State finalists are eligible for National Grand Lodge contest and the three national awards range from $1,500 to $2,000 in educational certificates.
