Impossible? Not for us

Central station electric service in rural America was once considered an "impossible dream."

But today nearly a thousand locally owned rural electric systems, such as ours, are hard at work — providing dependable power to more than 20 million consumers . . . gearing up to keep pace with mounting needs.

Our crystal ball tells us we'll be working even harder in days to come. But then, we've always known our "impossible" job would never end.
