Union Oil won't leave Heppner

Union Oil Company of California will not withdraw from the small communities within the state that are presently covered by a city's restrictive gasoline delivery ordinances, according to Sen. Robert F. Smith, of Burns.

Smith said that Union Oil had sent a letter to a number of small communities, including Heppner, which have gasoline delivery ordinances or restrictions on underground tank storage. The letter said that unless cities changed their ordinances Union Oil would no longer be able to continue to operate gasoline dispensing service stations.

Union based its decision to withdraw from these cities on their interpretation of the regulations under the Federal Clean Air Act of 1970 governing lead in gasoline. Smith contacted the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency which clarified the situation concerning the types of gasoline that must be sold.

Smith had considered introducing legislation during this special session of the legislature to keep oil companies from pulling out of communities with restrictive ordinances, but received confirmation from Union Oil's northwest division sales manager that "it is not Union

Oil Company's intent to withdraw from the marketing communities within the State of Oregon."

The letter went on to say that Union's "purpose in attempting to remove or modify these restrictive delivery ordinances was to provide the most viable method for delivery of unleaded gasoline into these communities." "I am glad that Union Oil Company intends to continue its service in Oregon as the energy crisis has placed a hardship on everyone, and that they have reconsidered their original decision concerning this entire situation," Smith said.

Martin heads WCCC

Dennis Martin heads the roster of officers elected at the annual meeting of Willow Creek Country Club, Jan. 24, in the Columbia Basin Electric Co-op conference room.

Assisting Martin in his term of office will be John Edmondson, vice-president, and Conley Lanham, secretary-treasurer. Anne Schwarzin was elected to the board of directors.

Wednesday play winners for 1973 were Bob Jepsen, first, and Gary Hunt, second. Sunday play winners were Doug Gunderson, low gross, and Ed Hiemstra, low net.

After the meeting, coffee and doughnuts were served. Members viewed a golf movie filmed at the Firestone Country Club in Akron, O.

Reports on animal survival

The Veterinary Science 4-H Club gave a series of reports concerning small animal survival when they met with the Hoof and Horn Livestock Club at the fairgrounds annex, Feb. 13.

The reports were given by Randy Devine for beef, Lee Devine for rabbits, Molly Pierce, horses, and Mark Sargent. The reports dealt with proper feed for the mother, problems at birth, care of the new born and preventive medicine.

According to reporter Mark Sargent, the club voted to send a letter of congratulations to Anita Davidson on her recent selection to travel to Washington, D.C. The club's herdsman award for the month was given to Jody Marlatt.

Ernest Joiner of the Gazette-Times shows 4-H Club reporters methods used in "pasting up a newspaper." The youngsters toured the newspaper plant Saturday. From the left, Joiner, Mark Sargent, Dee Hedman, Lynne Gochauer, Jyl Hobbs, Christy Brandt, Danette Daltoso, Becky Hobbs and Tami Gorham.

GOT A MINUTE?
We're not much in the horn-blowing department, but when 2,000 families most of whom are your neighbors, subscribe to the weekly Gazette-Times, there must be a reason.
We admit to being a lively newspaper, with strong opinions on everything from Acid Heads to Zambesian Headhunters.
Some people think the cost of $5 a year for the Gazette-Times is a bargain, when you consider that it's less than a cup of coffee a week. Others aren't so sure!
If you'd like to see what the Gazette-Times is up to, send $5 ($6 outside Oregon). If you don't have $5 on you, we'll charge it against your next fall's wheat crop.
