Hardman, by Chapin

This is a picture of Hardman, taken some time between 1890 and 1900 by an amateur photographer named Guy Chapin, who lived in Hardman and had no known vocation. At this time it was a thriving community with hotels, three dance halls, a school, church, flour mill and retail businesses. The town was originally named Rawdog, and later became Dairyville. The area's post office was on the David Hardman ranch, and Hardman moved the post office to the community which later became Hardman. Down the canyon beyond Hardman, about where the Adams place is now, was another community, a rival one, known as Yallerdog.

Scenes From The Past

New ways to prepare economical beef dishes and new appliances will be demonstrated at the Mini-Beef-A-Rama, March 27, 1:30 p.m., at the Heppner Elk's Lodge. Beef cookery on a smokeless broiler will be included in demonstrations by Linda Baker. Kathy Jamieson will show how to get the most from time and money using a microwave oven. The big door prize drawing will be for a smokeless broiler.
