Heavy snow, rain insures excellent water supply

The water supply outlook for Oregon is extremely good, according to Dave Franzen, Soil Conservation Service. The mountain snowpack is generally third or fourth highest on record at most snow courses. Winter's precipitation has been above normal and reservoir storage is excellent, he said.

Fourteen snow courses located along the northern Cascade crest, in the Blue Mountains above Milton-Freewater and in the Wallowa Mountains set all time records for snow water equivalent on April 1. The snowpack around Mt. Hood exceeds the record of 1972 at many locations. Many courses were second, third and fourth highest on record. The snowpack is generally 100-120 per cent in Southcentral Oregon, 150 to 200 per cent in the Cascades and 120 to 200 per cent in Eastern Oregon.

Precipitation was above normal in all areas of the state during March. It was especially heavy in Klamath and Lake counties where it was over two times normal. Winter precipitation has ranged from 120 per cent in Southeastern Oregon up to 165 per cent in the Southwestern part of the state. All other areas varied between 140 and 155 per cent of average

Twenty-five major irrigation reservoirs are storing 2,816,000 acre feet of water. This is 550,000 acre feet more than the average amount stored on April 1, according to Franzen

Warm temperatures during the middle of March and more than normal precipitation combined to bring about heavy streamflow during the past month. Many streams produced flows 1-12 to 2 times normal. Streamflow for the normal snowmelt period, April-July, will generally be "excellent" in all areas of the state.

The above average condition of stored water supplies and a near record snowpack insures excellent supplies of water this summer for Oregon

The water supply outlook for Area 111 remains excellent. The snowpack is nearly twice the amount, with many snow courses exceeding the highest water content on record. Precipitation was slightly above average during March, and the soil moisture conditions are near average. Storage reservoirs will all fill, with stream flows expected to be 20-50 per cent above normal during the spring and summer months

The water supply outlook for Pine Creek, Wildhorse Creek.

Birch Creek, Butter Creek, Willow Creek, Rhea Creek and Rock Creek (John Day tributary) are all rated excellent for the spring season flow period, with average to excontent of 13.2 inches as compared to 7.0 inches last cellent for the late season.
