

Pauline Bier heads AAUW

MR. AND MRS. CHARLEY COLLEY

Members of the Heppner Branch of the American Association of University Women closed out their year's activities with a patio picnic and installation of new officers at the home of Liz Curtis, Saturday, May 4.

Guest for the program was Ernie Teal, curriculum director for the county's schools. Teal presented a program of questionnaires for members to complete, polling their opinions about curriculum emphasis in Morrow County Schools. He explained the new graduation requirements program to those present.

Newly elected officers were installed: Pauline Bier, president; Ann Doherty, first vice-president; Daryce Franzen, second vice-president; Patsy Tom, secretary; and Linda Johnson, treasurer. New officers were installed by outgoing officers, Liz Curtis, president; Sue Duncan, first vice-president; Justine Weatherford, secretary; and Mary Pat Lande, treasurer. Karen Mitchum, who has been the second vice-president, was unable to attend.

The branch will be involved in two programs during the summer. It plans to repeat the story hour at the library, which they began last summer. The group will raise money by operating concession stands at the rodeo in August. Plans for these projects were begun at the Saturday meeting.

During the luncheon, Mrs. Doherty presented ideas for next year's programs and study groups and collected suggestions and opinions from those present. Several ideas were gleaned from a report of the state convention given by Mrs. Curtis and Mrs. Bier, who attended the Portland meeting.

The group voted to donate to the girl's Slow Pitch program and to the publication being compiled by the creative writing class at Heppner High School.

The next AAUW meeting will be held in September.

Why send missionaries Answer to be provided

Mrs. Alma (Norman) Wiles, retired missionary nurse, plans to be at the Heppner Seventh-day Adventist church May 11 to give her observations and her answer to the question, "Why send missionaries to convert heathen of foreign countries—aren't people better off and happier with their original ways of doing things?"

Mrs. Wiles has recently returned from a trip that included "her" islands: especially the New Hebrides where she had gone as a bride many years ago. She and her husband were pioneer missionaries, living among the cannibals and winning their friendship, until Mr. Wiles fell victim, not to the cannibals, but to the dread blackwater fever. It was the custom of the time that a widow be buried with her husband, and friendly natives hurried Mrs. Wiles to a safer location.

She came to America, became a nurse, and went to another mission area. She has served as a missionary nurse in various locations over a period of many years. Now retired in America, she has dreams of returning and visiting some of the people for whom she had worked, and last year her dream came true. She will tell of the changes of half-century of the gospel has made in the lives of cannibals of the New Hebrides and their descendants.

1974 marks the 100th anniversary of Seventh-day Adventists in foreign mission work. Of the 225 countries and political subdivisions counted by the United Nations, Adventists are working in 193. More than numbers or any other statistics, the success of this work can be judged by the changed lives of the people of these countries, she said. Mrs. Wiles has had first-hand experience in what missions have accomplished over the years. The stories she will tell will provide ample verification, she believes, for her strong conviction as to whether or not mission service is worthwhile. This May 11, regular service begins at 9:30 a.m. The public is invited.

Local arts, crafts on display here

A new showing of local arts and crafts went on display at Virginia Whitaker's Lebusch Shop in Heppner, May 1.

Featured for May is a photography display presented by the Heppner High School photography class taught by Dennis Toney. The pictures have been taken, developed and mounted by students.

The revival of an old art is being shown by three craftsmen. The art of stained glass is coming into its own again. Greg and Mike Sweek have a Tiffany style lamp and a candle holder on display, and Rick Curtis has several original design candle holders. All three take orders for stained glass work.

Betty Brown has two oil paintings. A new display of Linda Johnson's candles have been put out. Ruth Nutting is showing mod podge pictures. Jewelry by Mabel Heath, crib toy bags by Liz Curtis, a doll and decorated hangers by Edna Turner, John Gochbauer's leather crosses, all of his own design, can be seen. All of these people will sell the items displayed or take orders. Mrs. Whitaker has the price list of items and phone numbers of those displaying arts and crafts pieces in her store.

Those wishing to display their work at Lebusch Shop in June are asked to contact Jeannie Howell, Linda Johnson or Liz Curtis by the last week in May.

Colleys observe 50th anniversary

Charley and Ruby Colley were honored on their 50th wedding anniversary, May 5, 2 to 5 p.m., at the country home of Lee Wagenblast.

Mr. and Mrs. Colley (the former Ruby E. Pool) were married May 5, 1924, in Vale, Ore. They have one son, Lee Mr. Colley, Safford, Ariz., who is now a spray pilot; two grandchildren, Balyis L. Colley, Casa Grande, Ariz., and Mrs. Harry (Lynda M. Colley) Myers, Santa Rosa, Ca., and two great-grandsons

The Colleys moved to Lexington in the spring of 1950 where Mr. Colley was employed at the International Harvester Machinery Co., and later for Morrow County Grain Growers. He retired in June, 1971. That summer they sold their Lexington home and moved to the Wagenblast Ranch where they now reside. Colley has worked on construction as a heavy duty operator before moving to Lexington.

Hostesses for the reception were Mr. and Mrs. Lee Colley and Mrs. Wagenblast, assisted by her sisters, Mrs. Helen Kruger and Mrs. Marie Martin.

The serving table, decorated with a white lace table cloth over gold, held the three-tiered wedding cake trimmed with pink apple blossoms and topped with an angel holding a large golden 50.

Mrs. Kruger served the cake; Mrs. Wagenblast, the punch; and Mrs. Martin, poured coffee from silver service.

The Colleys were presented many gifts, among them a small gold engraved bell and an original money tree.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Charley Pool, Portland; Mrs. Colley's brother, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Burkhart, Hood River; Mrs. Colley's niece, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Koenig, Prosser, Wn.; Mrs. Ollie Reade, Spray; Mr. and Mrs. Ken Reade, Condon; John Wagenblast, Salem; and many local friends.

Band, chorus in final concert

The Heppner High School Band and Chorus will give its last performance of the season with a spring concert, Tuesday, May 14, 7:30 p.m., at the high school cafeteria.

The program will include a variety of music. In the final number, "Live and Let Die," by Paul McCartney, combining the band and chorus, Michelle Evans will be featured soloist.

During the evening, music awards will be presented to outstanding students, most improved musicians and recognition to all seniors.

Refreshments will be served following the concert by the Heppner Band Parents Club.

Warning to day care mothers

Many Day Care Mothers in Morrow - Gilliam - Wheeler counties do not realize that they must be certified to care for children, and could be violating the law, according to Mary Rogers, head of the Children's Services Division, Department of Human Resources.

Any person providing care for more than four children unrelated to them requires a state certificate. A federal day care certificate must be required if the person is providing for, including her own children, a total of five if she has children under the age of 3. No more than two children under the age of 2 are allowed. Or including her own children, a total of 6 is allowed if all the children are age 3 or over. If a home meets minimum regulations, no charge is made for the certificate. Continued violation of the Oregon statute will result in a referral to the Oregon Attorney General, who will issue an injunction charging the day care mother with a misdemeanor, and that each day of violation may be considered a separate offense, Mrs. Rogers said.

Day care mothers should contact the Morrow-Gilliam-Wheeler Children's Services Division, P.O. Box 175, Heppner, Oregon 97836, for information on how to get certified.

Failure to contact the Children's Services Division office could result in the mother's name being given to the state office for failing to comply.

Deadline is June 1 for mini-college

Oregon women are offered a chance to explore new ideas, make new friends and take a learning break on the state's largest campus, Oregon State University, at the 1974 Mini-College for Homemakers, June 18-21.

Pre-registration, due June 1, is necessary for the array of classes and activities planned for this session. Homemakers will stay in OSU's newest residence hall and be a part of the campus scene for a few days. Cost is $35, which includes room, board and tuition.

OSU and Oregon Extension Service have joined forces to bring this new idea in adult learning to women of Oregon. Instructors are from the OSU faculty, law enforcement agencies, state judiciary, industry and business.

Classes, which may be selected individually at the time of registration, cover a wide variety of subjects intended to be of interest to all women.

Birdine Tullis, Morrow program assistant, reports the mini-college is for all women of any age group, those involved in extension activities as well as non-members. Several younger Morrow County homemakers have already registered to attend.

For registration forms and more information, call the Morrow County Extension Office, 676-9642, or write Box 397, Heppner.

SINGSPARATION DRAWS 80 TO CHURCH

Last Sunday evening 80 persons sang together at the Heppner United Methodist Church. Virginia Whitaker was the song leader; Betty Marquardt, pianist; and visiting evangelist Hershel Thornburg added much with his organ accompaniment. Methodist ladies served refreshments.

The next Community Sing-spiration is planned for the first Sunday evening in June at the Assembly of God Church.
