

Pre-school testing of area children

A visiting team from the Oregon State Health Division, aided by local technicians and volunteers organized by Mrs. Birdine Tullis, examined 95 children at Irrigon Monday and many more in Heppner on Tuesday.

Each child was checked as to growth, vision, hearing, and given needed immunizations.

If parents had these things done privately the cost would run between $35 and $50, according to Edythe Connolly, school health educational consultant, a member of the visiting team.

Specialists assisting the main team included the new nurse-practitioner from Fossil, Ann Coiner, and Heppner technician Daryce Franzen and assistant Jennifer McLaughlin. Three students members of an Oregon State University nutrition team, also worked at taking random samplings in this rural area. These students, June Warner, Elena Brineman and Mary Koblit, have been taking samplings all around Oregon.

The health department team which made this program possible included Dr. Mary Gralinger, Portland pediatrician; Eline Glanz, pre-school hearing and vision director; Joy Strand, audiometrist; Naomi Nomura, nutritionist, and her assistant, nutrition student Lynn Jacobson; Mary Murphy, State Epidemiology Department; and Mary Erlanson, Maternal and Child Health Section nurse consultant.

The people who made the county fair 'go'

The Morrow County Fair was a success. The facilities were adequate and attractive. Exhibitors responded well, and they included persons of all ages from every part of the county.

Two high level groups discharged the basic responsibility for the fair. George Luciani, chairman, and Fair Board members Zearl Gillispie, Jim Norene, Paul Hisler, Floyd Jones, Secretary-treasurer Liz Curtis and Building Superintendent Hazel Bauman made plans and executed them. The board was assisted by the Fair Committee: Helen Acock, chairman, Jean Bennett, Beverly Doherty, Delpha Jones, Francine Evans, Pete Richards, Ron Black, Mike Howell, Merlin Cantin and Hal Whitaker.

Much of the on-the-scene, hour-by-hour responsibility fell on the superintendents of each class. Some of these people have given years of service; some are new hands. In open class beef, Don Robinson; sheep and wool, Jerald Rea; rabbits, Donna Bergstrom; poultry, Marge Acock were "bosses." The Saddle Horse Show was again supervised by the Wranglers Riding Club and Superintendent Bob Steagall. Veteran Superintendent William Bawlin presided over the hay, grass and grain entries. Rev. Edwin Cutting, Doris Cutting, Mrs. Fred Martin and Annetta Klinger ruled over fruits and vegetables.

The community booths were guided by Mary Lindsay; clothing superintendents were Marilyn Bergstrom and Marian Bronsan; needlework, Ruth Bergstrom, Frieda Majeske and Ann Bergstrom; who also supervised knitting entries. The hobby entries were under Mabel Heath and Kay Walsingham; Dennis Toney headed photography; Martha Munkers presided over canning. Baked foods superintendents were Helen Currin and Sue Vinson.

Floriculture and flower arrangements were under Delpha Jones, Hazel Hamlin, Carolyn Howard and Hilda Yocom. Joyce Ward, Anna Schwarzin, Darlene Arrington and Monica Jones superintended the children's corner. The new teen craft section was under Tammi Brannon and Kelley Wolff. John Goch-nauer again took charge of the pet show.

The many classes in the 4-H Division were supervised by Extension Agent Mike Howell and Extension Program Assistant Burdine Tullis.

4-H sections included home economics foods with its new Oregon League Wheathearts Contest, and many clothing, knitting and needlework sections. The large group of livestock classes each had a superintendent: beef, Ron Haguewood; sheep, Judy Currin; swine, Pete Richards and Bob Van Schoiack; dairy, Jean Bennett; goats, Marge Acock.

The 4-H and FFA market stock sale committee was Ron Currin, Ed Bronsan, Bob Van Schoiack, Bob Peterson, Merlin Hughes, Louis Carlson and Hal Whitaker. The 4-H Horse Show was under Kite Healy, Linda LaRue, Everett Struckmeier, Sandy Rodriquez and Mazine Linnell. Mrs. Bob Montgomery took over poultry and rabbits. Bonnie Clow conducted the dog section with its obedience trials, showmanship and dog judging and identification.

The tractor operators contest was under Mrs. George Griffith and Ken Nelson; John Canady supervised and judged 4-H herdmanship. Nancy Myers headed leather craft; Mildred Davidson had tote painting. Foods superintendents were Leann Rea and June Lindstrom; Pat Petty-john and June Lindstrom supervised the food contests; Jeannie Howell and Leann Rea managed the favorite food show. The clothing section was under Barbara Peterson, Shirley George and Rikka Tews; Mildred Davidson had knitting and crocheting; Cherly Hobbs, home environment. Leann Rea and Gladys Hobbs supervised 4-H presentations with Donna Bergstrom in charge of the sewing skill contest and Mildred Davidson of the knitting skill contest.

Superintendents for the 4-H Style Revue Wednesday night were Judy Laughlin, Donna Bergstrom, Francine Evans and Jeannie Howell.

All Future Farmers of America displays and contests were under Ron Black and Hal Whitaker. These included showmanship and judging in beef, sheep, swine, dairy cattle, poultry, rabbits, hay and grass, truck crops and farm shop. Ron Black supervised the FFA tractor driving contest.

Boyer stars for East

John Boyer, Heppner, caught scoring passes of 36 and 60 yards in the annual East-West Shrine All-Star Game in Baker Saturday night, and received the East's Outstanding Lineman Award.

The East won the contest, 29-27. It was the second victory in a row for the East, but the West still leads the series, 13-8-1. The teams are composed of graduated players from AA and A high schools in Oregon.

East Quarterback Ray Paiement of AA state champion Marist, connected with Boyer for two touchdown passes, ran for another, passed for four conversion points and kicked another to lead the win. Paiement was named the game's Most Valuable Player.

It was the second-highest scoring game in the series' 22-year history.

"I'm from a small school and, I think they (the West) were looking for John Teller than me," said Boyer after the game. Teller played at end along with Ray Paiement for Eugene's Marist High School.

"We tried to get me isolated against them and I was just fast enough to get past them," said Boyer between sips of Coke in the victorious East locker room.

Speaking of Boyer, East quarterback Ray Paiement said "It's easy to get the pass
