DEAR HARVEY:

From the evaluation of your slant and pressure, we know that everyday incidents appear to stir your feelings. Because of your highly responsive nature, you are better able to understand the emotions of others. When you are hurt or pleased, new experiences in time crowd out the memory, but your thinking is never far removed from emotional influence. You may be naturally impulsive, tending to act before you think.

Cultivation of emotional control is as necessary as food for the body, so you apparently are not one to rely on first impressions to form your opinions; rather, you carefully work out each detail as you build toward your conclusions. You feel this is a reliable way to reach the right answer. Further, you appreciate that facts mean nothing unless they are rightly understood, rightly related and rightly interpreted.

Intuition, the supra-logic that cuts out all routine processes of thought and leaps straight from problem to problem, gives you direct insight about matters and enables you to grasp ideas quickly. Then your mind spotlights the task at hand, thinks in a straight line—without waste of time or effort.

One may conclude you believe in systematic planning and united effort. You do not draw back from a course of action once you have reached a conclusion.

Strong will power and determination ensure the completion of whatever you start; however, you do not fully believe in yourself. There is evidence that making a decision is difficult for you, or being able to come to a definite decision is difficult. To terminate a situation or controversy is almost painful because of the fear of finality, the fear of criticism, and the fear of imposition.

In more secure moments you are capable of decisive thinking and positive action. As you know, decisiveness plays a star role as a leadership quality. Should you decide to start a law practice with a group of friends you will want first to develop a combination of strong traits, working positively, to compensate for a somewhat uncertain approach to the solving of problems at the present time.

Do not be like the donkey that starved to death between two stacks of hay because he wouldn't make up his mind which stack to eat.

Establish your own identity by forcing yourself to have "a mind of your own." Forgive the past and accept the reality of the present. Then you will know what to do, will possess force for accomplishment, and will be able to live a meaningful life.

Yours,
MARGARET

Tatones win suit

A Morrow County grand jury has ruled in favor of Joe and Alice Tatone, owners of the Dodge City Inn at Boardman, in a civil action brought by Daniel Gardyjan of Texas. The jury, which heard the case last Wednesday, took only 30 minutes to relieve the Tatones of damages in connection with the plaintiff's claim he suffered from food eaten at the Tatones' restaurant on April 12, 1972.

Gardyjan had asked $10,000 general damages and $692 special damages as a result of the alleged food poisoning case.

The case was heard by Circuit Court Judge William W. Wells.
