

Alumax Pacific Corporation aluminum plant to be cleanest

PACIFIC

Alumax Pacific Corporation will build the cleanest aluminum reduction plant in the world at the Port of Umatilla. Installation priced at $300 million, the new unit will be a showcase in the industry, with two pot lines (214 cells each) providing a total yearly production capacity of 187,300 tons of aluminum ingot.

Construction will require a peak of 1800 jobs and the operating plant will employ 800 workers on a $12 million annual payroll.

Alumax, through worldwide testing, has been able to announce that the proposed Umatilla operation will surpass all state and federal pollution controls. All process water will be recycled and none will be discharged into the Columbia.

Fluoride emissions will be at less than one pound for every ton of aluminum produced State of Oregon standards allow one pound of fluoride per ton of produced aluminum.

Alumina will arrive in the Northwest by ship from Australia. It will be sent in enclosed rail cars or barges to Port of Umatilla. Approximately two pounds of alumina will evolve into one pound of pure aluminum after processing at the new plant.

Output will be sold or used in Alumax fabricating plants throughout the U.S. Some will

Scholarship guidelines

New guidelines for those interested in making application for Grants-in-Aid from the Carl Troedson Educational Fund have been announced by the scholarship committee.

The grant provides funds for graduating seniors and a limited number of college students for the purpose of furthering their education. Major changes are an increase in the amount of the individual scholarships for graduating seniors to $750. This will imit the number of these scholarships available. In the past year no scholarship exceeded $400 with some as low as $100. However, a larger number were given.

Eligibility of college students has been clarified to include only those college students who were granted the scholarship originally upon graduation from high school

Students presently in college who have not received a grant as a graduating senior are not eligible to apply.

Application forms available at eath high school office and at the School District Office in Lexington.
