BMCC courses transferable

All vocational-technical courses in Blue Mountain Community College's Technical Agriculture program are now transferable to Oregon State University's Agricultural Education Department, BMCC President Ron Daniels announced.

Aimed primarily at students who plan to become vocational agriculture teachers, the agreement between the two schools is expected to be expanded to include other departments in the School of Agriculture at Oregon State University.

"What the agreement means is that a student who earns an Associate degree in Technical Agriculture at BMCC may transfer to Oregon State's Agricultural Education department as a junior," Daniels said.

"Up to 45 credit hours of the student's vocational technical coursework in technical agriculture will transfer to the Agricultural Education department at OSU, in addition to the liberal arts courses which have always been transferred," Daniels explained.

Total credit hours that can be transferred is 108, slightly more than most students complete in two years.

The BMCC agriculture curriculum includes extensive offerings in crops and animal production, business agriculture and mechanized agriculture. The program is one of the largest in the college.

Wheat allotments delayed

Issuance of the 1976 wheat allotment notices will be postponed according to David McLeod, executive director of the local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service Office. The Allotment Notices, usually issued in August, will be combined with the 1976 Feed Grain notices and issued after the first of next year.

By issuing only one allotment notice instead of two, the ASCS county office expects to cut expense and increase efficiency in program administration.

The 1976 national wheat allotment of 61.6 million acres is 15 per cent above the 1975 allotment. Farmers who plan to plant wheat this fall can closely estimate their own 1976 wheat allotment by increasing their 1974 allotment by 10 per cent.

The ASCS spokesman says no acreage set-aside will be required as a condition of eligibility for loans, target price and disaster payments. He pointed out that the farm wheat allotment in no way limits the number of acres of wheat that may be planted. Applicants for all ASCS programs will be given equal consideration without regard to race, color, sex, creed or national origin.

Registration opens at BMCC, Sept. 22

Fall term registration at Blue Mountain Community College will open Sept. 22 and will continue through Sept. 26, President Ron Daniels announced this week.

Persons planning on entering the college this fall are asked to register as early as possible. Classes will begin Sept. 29.

Several new classes, including Geology, are listed in the new college schedule. The schedule, now available on the campus, lists all classes to be offered through the school year.

For the first time in its 13-year history Blue Mountain Community College will offer a full range of campus-based classes and activities when the fall term opens late this month.

In addition to indoor physical education facilities which are expected to be completed within a few weeks, the college will have its own track and tennis courts sometime this fall.

In past years many of the college's physical education classes and all athletic and intramural activities have been conducted in rented facilities.

The new music building has been completed and is now occupied by the college's two-year-old music department. Problems have been encountered in the indoor swimming pool, requiring extensive repairs. The pool is expected to be ready in 30 days. The gymnasium is expected to be ready when classes open Sept. 29.
