SPRAY NEWS
Mary Williams

The Bob Ashmeades, who visited Bob's mother, Effie, recently in Prineville says she is doing well and already happily anticipating Mar. 16, which will mark Effie's centennial birth date.

I have a poem Effie gave me a lot of years ago, "Be True to Yourself."

It may not have had a great bearing on her longevity, but knowing her as a friend, certainly it has put a store of wealth into those years, valuable to all.

Kevin Troxell had guests in for celebrating his third birthday Saturday evening. Present for dinner and sharing the birthday cake were his grandparents, Don and June Troxell, Ray and Marie Britt and his great grandmother, Alice Deitz. Others included Tuck Jackson, Don and Sue Troxell, here from Sandy, Sherrill and Steve Cossett, Lloyd Little, Shirli and Zoretta Potter and Donna Rae Gentry, Heppner. Donna Rae has spent a week here with her grandparents, Ray and Marie Britt.

Janet Stroeber and her three daughters spent last weekend here with her parents, the Frank Cecilis and at

"OUTSTANDING" RATING FOR HEALTH SERVICE

The Federal Site Team from Washington, Oregon, and Washington, D.C., which inspected the Eastern Oregon Comprehensive Community Mental Health Services the week of Feb. 2-6, 1976, gave EOCMHC an overall rating of "outstanding." The Site Team emphasized this rating was seldom given and that EOCMHC would be used as a "National Model." One segment of the EOCMHC is the Morrow County Mental Health Clinic under the direction of Terry D. Hirni, ACSW, with Jim Angermeyer, MA, staff psychologist, and Mary Pat Lande, secretary.

The EOCMHC was started 3 1/2 years ago to enable the rural communities to have mental health clinics. Representatives of the 13 counties of Eastern Oregon got together and applied for a federal grant to establish the EOCMHC.

Elsie Ho, of the National Institute for Mental Health Office, Seattle, and Charlotte Markel, an instructor of the University of Oregon School of Psychiatric Nursing in Portland, were the Federal Site members who inspected the Morrow County Mental Health Clinic.

After their inspection of the clinic's services and talking to the county commissioners, Mental Health Advisory Board members, school principals, and some consumers, both Ho and Markel thought the Morrow County program was excellent. They were quite impressed about how well the community was accepting the Mental Health Clinic.

BMCC NEWS

Blue Mountain Community College will offer an Expectant Parents course in Heppner on Monday evenings starting Feb. 23. This 8-week course will be held at the Columbia Basin Electric Co-op. meeting room from 7:30-9:30 p.m. Tuition is $20 per couple.

The Lamaze method of trained childbirth will be taught. Women will learn and practice relaxation and breathing techniques designed to aid them in labor and delivery. Husbands will learn techniques to help their wives in the labor and delivery process.

Expectant couples will also receive Red Cross training, learn the physiology of the birth process, study nutrition and learn pre-natal and post-natal care.

No pre-registration is necessary for the class; however, anyone wanting more information may contact the instructor, Nonda Sunday, 676-5063, or BMCC Community Coordinator Anne Doherty, 676-5277.

Visitors at the Billy Richards home last week were Bill and Ruth Toll of Fruitland, ID. The Tolls were enroute to the Oregon coast for vacationing.

Attending funeral services for Amy Bratt in Pendleton last week were Eddie and Evelyn Cress, Joyce and Odell Adams, Lee and Ellen Brisbois, the Gus Streckers, Celia Reed and Amine Nichols.

My apologies for this week's brief column. I have been away and only hope you folks will keep in mind your noteworthy tid bits. I will be around to pick them up for next week's issue. Thanks.
