

Party Line

By Dorothy Zita

Last Friday the Soroptimist gave the Valentine party for the Pioneer Memorial Convalescent home residents. The dining room and hallways were gaily decorated with valentines made by the Sunshine Blue Birds. Mrs. Emil Groshens started the party by leading the group into a song "Roll Out the Barrel", "Memories" and "You Are My Sunshine", were requested. The party ended with cake and punch served to everyone. The bright smiles and laughter was reward enough for the Soroptimist ladies to know that their party was a big success.

There is a group in Ione that is trying to buy and move the old railroad depot. Sounds like a good idea for a local museum for that city.

Melvin and Lois Allyn, Lexington, have not moved, but just bought a new mobile home. Lois is enjoying all the extra room in her new home.

Weekend visitors at the Elwyn and Maude Hughes were Loy and Wayne Harsin and children Cindy and Kerry and Tom and Kathy Kramer, Forest Grove. Wayne worked for the city here until they moved to Forest Grove where he is an assessor for Washington County, Hillsboro.

Cassandra Chapel was home from EOSC for a three day holiday. She has recently been elected to the newly formed EOSC student forum. This forum is taking the place of the student body officers.

Mr. and Mrs. Barton Clark were in Portland Monday to attend the State Grange Agriculture Meeting. The Clarks remained in Portland over the weekend to attend a Grange Insurance Association meeting at the State Grange headquarters Building.

Weekend guests at the Archie Padberg home included his sons, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Padberg, Jr., and their grandson, Gresham and Mr. Vern Padberg, Tigard. The visit was to celebrate the birthday of Archie Padberg Sr., whose birthday was Monday.

David Moon, planning director of Morrow county, gave me a tour of the north end of the county, showing me the new construction now underway there.

Boardman is growing internally because of the city water and sewers that were planned when the city was relocated. A new mobile home site, a new subdivision will be constructed this year. The park that attracts tourists and the local people for summer recreation is an asset to the community. But most of the growth of the city except for the food processing plants along the river front, is still on the drawing board.

Then we drove around Irrigon, where the city fathers in 1935 platted a township for 30,000 residents; one acre lots, no city water or sewage system.

There is an airstrip along Highway 730, a barn being constructed and other buildings under construction, without building permits or appearing before the planning commission board for construction approval.

All one has to do, is take an active interest in our county to realize that growth is underway. There was also comment from one of the local Irrigon residents giving us fair warning, that the next step, is to have their own courthouse and adequate representation for the north end.

Visiting their mother, Mary Bailey, over the weekend were Nelson Bailey, Oregon City and Francis and Dorothy Bailey, Tigard.

Bicentennial symbol Engaged Book Review

on diplomas

John W. Warner wants the Class of '76 to have a special commemorative of the nation's Bicentennial. Mr. Warner, Administrator of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration (ARBA), has urged all educational systems and institutions to commemorate the significance of 1776 by including the national Bicentennial symbol on their certificates of graduation.

In addition to placing the symbol on diplomas, schools are encouraged to use it in their yearbooks, along with appropriate articles on student participation in the Bicentennial.

The symbol, which takes the form of a 5-pointed star surrounded by a red, white and blue star, has become increasingly familiar in the past months as the symbol of America's 200th anniversary.

The new policy regarding yearbooks and diplomas was made possible by recently revised guidelines on the use of the national symbol.

Under law the ARBA has the responsibility of regulating the use of the national symbol, and has said that specific authorization is not needed by a school so long as the symbol will not be used in conjunction with any advertising.

Use of the national Bicentennial symbol must conform with the standards and guidelines of the ARBA Graphics Standards Manual. The manual can be obtained from the ARBA, 2401 E Street, N.W., Washington D.C. 20276.

Mr. Warner said: "Graduates of 1976 should have more than vague memories of their final year in school. They should have a lasting moment of a year that saw them embark on their new life, and a year that saw America embark on its Third Century."

Michael M. Mooney's book "The Hindenburg," the basis for the recent motion picture, was reviewed for the Bookworm Club, Jan. 26 by Pauline Winter.

The book includes diagrams and actual pictures of the airship made before and during its tremendous explosion. Mooney claims to reveal "never-before-told secrets, about the Zeppelin and the disaster that stunned the world."

The great airship was ten stories tall, bigger than the biggest battleship with huge swastikas emblazoned on its sides. After several successful trans-Atlantic crossings it exploded in flames before a stunned and helpless crowd May 6, 1937 at Lakehurst, NJ.

Author Mooney asks the following questions: "Was it sabotage?" Why were Luftwaffe officers in civilian clothes assigned to patrol the giant airship on its last trip? Who or what were they looking for? Why did the American and Nazi governments agree to keep the real cause of the disaster a secret?"

The opening page of the book gives these facts: "To the passengers who had paid for luxury, the Hindenburg was a flying palace boasting hot and cold shower rooms, a bar, smoking room, library, dining salon, plush staterooms that converted to private sitting rooms by day, a stewardess to care for children and to help the ladies with their hair, and a passenger list of international celebrities ranging from Douglas Fairbanks—who wore slippers—initialed DF in diamonds—to Max Schmeling, who received a hero's welcome as he disembarked in Frankfurt after defeating Joe Louis."

"To Dr. Hugo Eckener, director of the Zeppelin Company, the Hindenburg represented technology at its zenith and was a hope for international peace. To Dr. Joseph Goebbels, Minister of Propaganda, the Hindenburg was a symbol of Nazi supremacy."

Mrs. Winter was able to answer many questions about the construction and operation of the airship to her interested listeners. The review stimulated a great deal of interest in the book. Marion Abrams, club president was hostess for the meeting at which "The Hindenburg" was reviewed.
