LAPP program successful

The LAPP Program at Heppner Elementary School concluded last week with a tea honoring the volunteers. Over 600 hours were logged by 22 men and women during the program, which began in January.

Certificates listing the time each spent listening to children read, or in other ways helping with the reading program, were presented. The volunteers also received colorful planters made by first graders, and thank you cards and notes from the children.

Also honored for extended volunteer work in the grade school for the past three years was Mrs. Nancy McElhany.

The Lapp Project (Listen-Appreciate-Praise Progress) was proposed by Heppner teachers Pauline Miller and Rachel Dick. They received a Teachers Incentive Grant for the proposal, which enabled them to buy lunches and pay mileage for volunteers, and to refinish or recover donated chairs and buy lamps.

The "reading ladies," as the smaller children called the people who worked with them, were led in their donation of time by Irene Swanson, with 86 hours and Faye Ruhl, with 78.

Other helpers, some of whom helped in several grade levels, who were honored were Mrs. Carol Kerr, 32 hours; Rev. Edwin Cutting, 36 hours; Doris Cutting, 35; Fay Pierce, 37; Sandy Graham, 25; Marjorie Worden, 23; Beth Bryant, 20; Ella Smith, 23; Iva Booker, 10; Winifred Cox, 44;

Snoda Blake, 5; Della McCurdy, 21; Nancy Myers, 20; Ruth Bergstrom, 19; Marilyn Bergstrom, 15; Lesley Patching, 16; Linda Padberg, 16; Sheree Mahoney, 16; Daisy Collins, 12; Ed Dick, who helped in other ways than working with the children, donated 16 hours.

Under the terms of the grant, the volunteers, children and participating teachers have rated the program. Reading test scores this May will be compared with scores on the same test by the same children last year. The project will be fully described in a final paper by Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Dick, and available from the Teachers Incentive Program in Eugene for other schools who are interested in such a project.

Volunteers, children, and the two directors have been enthusiastic over the gain in interest in reading this spring. Next year volunteers will again be used in a local unfunded program which will be broadened to include individual drilling in math, help with the individualized spelling, and help with reading games and drills as well as listening to the children read.

After this year's pilot program, both teachers and volunteers are better prepared to work together. Next fall teachers who wish to use volunteers will be asked to list the hours of the day and the type of help they can use; this will be matched by those who wish to help.
