It seems the only time the voters are asked to pay special attention to the President of the United States is during the election year. Joyce and Herm Winter, Don and Carolyn Cole and Jerry and Mike Sweeney traveled to Pendleton to meet President Ford last Sunday. Carolyn and Joyce were very excited over the event, and especially when they shook hands with him.

It seems the Triple Link Club of the Sans Souci Rebekah Lodge are having a difficulty giving away the quilt displayed in Lebusch Shoppe window. They are on their second drawing and if anyone has the ticket showing the last numbers of 285 please check at Lebusch Shoppe. You may be the winner of that beautiful quilt.

Up for the week of fishing and camping in their travel trailer were Art and Doris Watkins, The Dalles. They were pleased with the fishing, but were more pleased with all the friends that visited them while they were camping.

Jim Rogers is asked at least once a day, "When is that new restaurant of yours going to be opened?" His answer is, "When it is ready." Jim, that just leads us to ask another question.

Phil and Betty Doherty have moved here from Newport, OR. Phil is employed at the Farley Motor Co. and Betty is working for the Forest Service, where she was employed before she moved from here.

Jean Hansen was in a helpful mood, and decided to replace the light bulbs in the ceiling fixtures. Wouldn't you know the next step, there went Jeannie to the floor, falling from the chair. Slightly embarrassed, she found out that she could not walk on her foot. Now Jean has a cast for her broken foot.

But there has been some good news at the Hansens too. Jeannie's son Frank called her from Antarctica for Mothers Day. Frank had been trying to contact a local ham operator to patch a call to her, but finally a ham operator in Santa Cruz, NM placed the call for him. Frank said it is 124 degrees below zero and the wind makes the chill factor. It is now the winter season there and they are in complete darkness for 24 hours a day. The last plane that flew in was in February and the next plane is due Sept. 1. He spends his spare time reading and watching movies. Jeannie was thrilled with Frank's call and said it was one of the most exciting presents, she has ever received.

The seventh and eighth graders held a Science Fair under the direction of Mr. Michael Gorman, science teacher in the Multi-purpose room, Heppner Grade School. It was fascinating and I wish I had the time and space to describe each project made by the students. The different taste testers were a puzzle, I got one right. The rest I called sweet, when it was sour and so on. The maze that caught my eye was Chris Riddles, "Can an Ant Run a Maze? The answer of course was "yes." But we saw no ants there to prove it. The first place winner of the Electro Maze was another project that was not in working order, but the work that went into it was impressive. The girls that made the color translators commented in their notes, that if they were to do it again they would make sure the right diode was placed correctly, as the unsoldering was almost the downfall of the project. We saw snakes, lots of hamsters running mazes, guppies in salt water, wind tunnels that replaced broken glass for, cost $25, again, almost ending a project before it started, plants growing in different soils or chemicals. As I wrote before, it was an excellent science fair and we all learned something new, after attending this interesting event.

Science Fair winners were: 7th Grade: 1st, Electro Maze—Pat Clarke and Herman Winter. 2nd, Color Translator—Deann Connor and Sharon Murray; 3rd Tornado Currents—Debbie Marquardt and Carolyn Plocharsky; 4th How Much Salt Can a Fish Live In—Anne Van Schoiack and Kellie Hammond; 5th, Inside a Volcano—Nancy Miller.

8th Grade: 1st, Solar Water Heating—Troy Borst and Todd Harrison; 2nd The Development of Taste—Alice Abrams and Patty Huddleston; 3rd Chick Embryology—Debra Klaus and Debbie Paustian; 4th Can a Gerbil Learn to Improve its Time Going Through a Maze—Sandi Hudson and Janette Piper and 5th Plants in Different Climates—Perry Wilson and Mike Jones.
