Church holds annual meeting

There will be no organized services in the Heppner Seventh-day Adventist Church for the next two weeks (June 12 and 19). The members will be meeting with the other Adventists of this area at the annual camp meeting held on the Walla Walla College campus in College Place, Washington.

"This is the most-looked-forward-to religious occasion of the church," said Pastor Lloyd Perrin. "Members will hear spiritual messages from outstanding church officials, fellowship with other Adventists from throughout the area, and will re-emphasize the spiritual direction of their lives."

Pastor Perrin, who is new in Heppner, has already left to go to the campus. He is joining ministers, Bible workers and other church employees from northeastern Oregon, eastern Washington, and the Idaho panhandle at the camp site to help prepare for the annual eight day religious convocation. Approximately 5,000 persons are expected over the week-ends.

Friday evening at sunset, Seventh-day Adventists usher in their day of worship, which lasts until sunset Saturday. For this reason, the first service of the convocation will begin on Friday evening of June 11, and the last service will be Staurday evening, June 19. Each day between these dates, services will be held, beginning at 6:30 a.m. and ending at 7:30 p.m. Anyone who happens to be near College Place during this time is cordially invited to attend the meetings.

Services will resume in the local Adventist Church on June 28.
