

Over The Tee Cup

By A. Duffer

It was perfect golf weather last Sunday when the local club hosted visitors from Condon and Kinzua. Eleven women and 48 men participated in the activities. Lowell Gribble was in charge of the events.

For the Condon men Bob Alford shot a 68 for low gross and also had the long drive. Mike Rothwell came in second with a 71 and also won the KP for the second shot on No. 8. Other winners included Dave Barnett with a 53 for low net honors and a four-way tie for second low net between C.L. Hollen, Larry Ashbury, Bob Cooney and Dal Ashenfelder. All shot a 57. Dale Ashenfelder was well within the four circle on No. 4 to win KP. Joe Neys had the dubious honor of having the high score of the tournament at 95.

Kinzua golfers didn't quite equal the Condon scores but nevertheless scored very well. Heading the list of winners was Henry Spivey with a 71 to take low gross honors. Don Slinkard and John Shaw tied for second with a 73. In the low net division Rollo Loomis was tops with a 55 followed by Mill Boring with a 60. John Shaw was a three time winner as he won both KPs. Long drive awards went to Henry Spivey who topped all players with his drive.

For the local golfers Bob Jepsen won the low gross award shooting 7 over par for a 67. He was followed by Craig Cooley with a 68. A couple of real good games. A 50 by Weyland Hiatt was good enough to win him low net and Norm Rickert came in with a 53 for second. This was Norm's first time out since he had surgery. The host for the day, Lowell Gribble took long drive honors and John Edmondson demonstrated his golfing talents by winning both Kps.

The women's tournament consisted of nine holes of play and winners for the Condon group was Dorothy Close with a 39 for low gross. Dorothy also had the long drive for this group of ladies. Dee Hollen won low net award with a 31. Georgia Loomis was the only lady golfing from Kinzua so had little difficulty in winning both low gross and long drive.

Some of the Heppner women showed everyone how to play the game. Vicki Edmondson burned up the course with a 33 to win low gross and Vi Lanham came in with a 23 to win low net. Vicki also had the long drive. I'm told that Monica Jones was selected as having the most potential. I assume they are talking about golf.

Everyone enjoyed a lunch catered by Jim. A sole survivor competition followed and the winners will remain anonymous.

The weatherman hasn't cooperated with the women in their Tuesday morning and evening play. It has been cold nearly everytime so the number of players has been rather limited. They request that men playing make-up matches on Tuesday evening wait until after 5:30 before teeing off.

Next Sunday the WCCC members will host our neighboring golfers from McNary.

Ione Awards

Also of interest here is the Ione awards night when Bob, son of Pauline and the late Billy Gates graduated from Ione High, receiving the citizenship award. Bob's brother, Tom, a 1975 graduate of that school was also the recipient of that award and a Sports Memorial Trophy bearing their father's name has been placed in the high school, dedicated by fellow students as a memorial honoring Billy Gates. The senior students presented Mrs. Gates with a red rose and a potted plant as a memorial.

Bob also received all star, first team outfield in baseball, the Carl Troedsen and Kenneth Lundell scholarships, was vice president of his class and will major in general science at Eastern Oregon State College, LaGrande at the fall term.

SPRAY NEWS

Mary Williams

I love life's little comedies. So, presuming you may have seen Fossil's fire hydrants, resplendent in their bicentennial garb, resembling small figures with out-stretched arms, I will share a laugh with you.

Sitting in my car on the main thoroughfare of our county seat, I watched a canine friend trot eagerly up to one of these at the bank's corner, stiffen in a moment of amazement, dubiously extend a paw in friendly handshake and continue anxiously on his way. As he rounded the corner, with a backward and still puzzled glance, one didn't need an interpreter to decipher his muttered, "I don't know what this Bicentennial is coming to but certainly it isn't going to the dogs!"

Of interest in the parade were the two ladies riding side-saddles, Valerie Howell and Jane Stirewalt, in dresses befitting the Bicentennial period, complete with sunbonnets and... one dare not be so presumptuous as to ask about the bustles. Only their seamstresses know.

A "kid" entry in the parade, maybe not mentioned in the winners circle but touching, was small Jason ("Little Fearless" to his friends) and son of Judy and Webb Alford, sound asleep on his grandad's arm, cowboy hat pulled against the sun.

Getting back to the side-saddlers, Jane's saddle is more than 100 years old and bears the Henry Kuck stamp. This man is a relative of Kuck, of Kuck and Bonney, saddle makers in The Dalles.

Valerie's saddle was purchased through Red Oster and of questionable age. This young woman, an accomplished leather worker, and having made a saddle of her own, has completely restored the antique piece.

Visiting a moment with Jane before Saturday's parade she related a bit of family humor. One of the family elders, admonishing all sweet young things to be ladies, commented she felt she, herself, was surely heavenward bound, "because" she assured one and all, "I have never played cards, never chawed tobacco and never ride astraddle." Agreed. That should take care of everything.

IRRIGON NEWS

Frances Rose Wilson

Vacation Bible School will begin June 14 at the Irrigon Assembly of God, with classes starting at 9:30 a.m. for all children between the ages of four and 13.

The theme "Let Freedom Ring", will commemorate the Bicentennial year. A commencement program is being planned for Friday evening June 11, when parents will be invited at 7 p.m.

Pastor Robert Schmolle extends a welcome to all.

A housing survey and census will be conducted in the City of Irrigon during the month of June, according to Mayor Chester Wilson. The survey team will consist of 6 members working under a Comprehensive Training Act program through the East Central Oregon Association of Counties, with minimal cost to the city. A similar survey was conducted in Umatilla and Hermiston recently.

Although the census data is not termed official for the purpose of state allocation of funds to the city, much of the information to be gathered is essential in preparing the city's comprehensive plan under LCDC required guide lines.

The members of the survey team will wear identification badges and residents are urged to give them the necessary cooperation to complete the project which will probably be the third week of June according to Mayor Wilson.

4-H Committees involved in state wide youth programs

Nearly 200 Oregon 4-H leaders and older members are actively involved in planning and evaluating state-wide 4-H and youth programs of the Oregon State University Extension Service.

H. Joe Myers, extension assistant director for 4-H and youth, notes that the volunteer leaders and members have "an important role in helping the OSU Extension staff insure that our programs are current and are meeting the needs of young people today."

Those serving on the state-wide committees and councils "represent more than 45,000 4-H members and over 6,000 volunteer leaders," Myers adds. Hundreds more serve on similar committees at the county level.

Most of the leaders and members serve on one of the 13 state developmental committees which also include extension agents, specialists and other OSU faculty members.

The others are members of the executive council of the Oregon 4-H Leaders' Association, headed by Marvel Smith, Amity, which serves as an advisory committee to the state 4-H staff and which makes recommendations concerning both program and policy. The developmental committees are organized around a particular 4-H project or program area. Myers explains. Committee members review and evaluate program, including projects, activities and publications, and recommend ways to improve or expand 4-H programs.

In addition, committee members may be involved in helping conduct training programs for other volunteer leaders and in conducting regional or state-wide events and activities.

Francine Evans, Irrigon, is just beginning her term as a member of the state council of the 4-H Leaders' Association.

Dick Sargent, Heppner, is a member of the animal science committee which is concerned with the 4-H beef, sheep, swine, dairy and dairy goat projects. Mike Howell, Morrow county Extension agent, is serving on the mechanical science committee.

Other developmental committees deal with 4-H dog, small animal, horse, creative arts, nutrition education, 4-H expansion, international, youth and community development, natural science, older youth and home economics programs.
