

Multi-phase program receives national honor

The Multi-phasic health screening sponsored the past two years by Morrow County Extension Service, County and State Health Departments, has received honorable mention on the national Extension Homemakers level for outstanding state activity, according to Coleen Hughes, OEHC Health chairman.

Out of the many state entries submitted for the national Elix Anderson Award, Morrow County received honorable mention. Ms. Hughes offers congratulations to the Morrow County Homemakers Advisory Committee, and all involved in the outstanding program. Announcement of the award was made at the recent Mini-college in Corvallis, where the certificate of achievement was received by Dorris Graves, for the county committee.

The free health screening for pre-kindergarten and pre-first grade students has been held the past two years, and will be repeated this year on August 19-20 in Irrigon and Heppner. The complete free health check, which includes all health examinations and immunizations needed for entering school will be available at A.C. Houghton School, Irrigon on August 19; Heppner elementary on August 20. Appointments for the Boardman-Irrigon area may be made by calling Mick Tolar 923-3321, or in the Heppner-Ione-Lexington area by calling Pat Wright, County Health nurse, 989-8258.

Volunteers helping in all phases of the multi-phasic screening made the program possible, and are needed again this year. Anyone willing to assist for a day, or part of a day, is asked to call Birdine Tullis, Extension Service, 676-9642.

Bergstrom and Jan Peterson, gave intensive training on actual modeling practices in preparation for both the contest and public style revue.

"Show Your Project" hints on finishing details and tips on exhibiting were given by Jeanne Howell, Home Ec. judge and teacher. Final touches for the afternoon of fun and education included refreshments, and opportunity to discuss problems or ideas with the clothing judges present.

With county fair less than a month away, the program was planned to prepare the girls for all phases of clothing events during fair. Pre-registration forms for all 4-H home economics events will be mailed to all girls enrolled next week.

Hired

Bruce Buchanan of Irrigon has been hired as a chemist by the Mulathon Oil Co., an oil processing company of Trading Bay, Alaska, on Cook Inlet. He will be in charge of their laboratory when on duty, working 7 days on and 7 days off.

Buchanan graduated from O.S.U. in June with a science degree. He thought his studies were over but now finds it is still necessary to study, to apply his knowledge to the oil processing business, according to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Buchanan of Irrigon.

Delegate

State Rep. Jack Sumner, Heppner, was among the Oregon delegation that nominated Jimmy Carter at the Democratic Convention in New York City recently. Sumner was elected as a Carter alternate.

Book sale

A 24 volume Britannica Encyclopedia plus 5 yearbooks are marked down to $25 and a 12 volume Nelson Encyclopedia is priced at $10 now at the library. The 15, 25 and 50 cent tables still hold many exciting hardback books. Collectors will find rare old volumes marked between $1 and $5 during library hours at the book sale through Aug. 31.

New sewer

New sewer lines will be put in at Cutsforth Park this week following the plugging up and collapsing of about 100 feet of line at the park.

Hatfield plans visit

Sen. Mark Hatfield will swing through Heppner next month on a tour of many Oregon cities. Hatfield will be at the Wagon Wheel at 3:15 p.m. on Aug. 12 to talk to local patrons and visitors. All are welcome.

Area growth spurs additional school dollars

The budget committee for Morrow County School District met Monday, July 19, to determine whether or not to use unexpected receipts from basic school support and other sources to complete several projects related to the district's building program. The projects had been cut because bids were too high.

The district had received an unexpected $109,105 in basic school support funds due to district student population growth. This is the first year that the school district has qualified for additional growth money.

The district also received an additional $30,900.48 in unexpected revenue largely from interest earnings, federal equalization money, sale of property and miscellaneous other receipts. The budget committee agreed to recommend to the school board that they adopt a supplemental budget to include items cut from the building programs in the amount of $70,430 and to include $14,000 for furniture, $4,250 for paving and grading and $80,000 for the purchase of new school sites in north Morrow County.

The district had received recommendation from its long range planning committee to purchase school sites but had not included an amount for land purchase in its bond issue of Sept. 1975. No land is currently under consideration.

The total supplemental budget would be $168,680 and would include $140,000 in unexpected receipts and $28,680 from funds saved through under expenditure of the 1975-76 school budget.

Visual history recorded

Audio history is being added to the visual history stored at the Morrow County Museum. Curator Rachel Harnett now has taped recordings that visitors may listen to or make their own copies from.

So far the tape collection includes recordings of talks given by a group of county pioneers at an Old Times' Night arranged by the A.A.U.W. last winter and complete records of the speeches made here on July 4, 1976 at the dedication of the restored Democrat Gulch School and at the dedication of the new metal flagpole at the County Courthouse. These bicentennial events were recorded by W.W. Weatherford.

The museum added a tape recorder to its working equipment this last year.

At 4H introduction

Ideas, tips learned

Creative ideas for denims, T-shirts and accessories, along with the opportunity to learn about modeling, showing 4-H projects and fun in store at country fair, drew a large crowd of 4-H members, mothers and leaders. The program presented by Birdine Tullis, Cheri Jo Carter, Jeanne Howell, Marie Rietmann, Kay Bergstrom, Jan Peterson, and Francine Evans, included all these and more!

Cheri Jo Carter, Wasco County Extension Agent presented a dazzling array of ideas for clothing construction exhibits. Francine Evans, style review chairman, gave grooming tips, as well as information on entering exhibits, and style revenue tips.

Area forests under 'forest fire season'

Users of National Forests in Oregon are reminded that these lands are now under "forest fire season" restrictions in regard to smoking and the building of open campfires.

Oregon burned a little less this year than it has in past years.

There were 231 forest fires on state-protected lands during the first six months of this year, about the same number as in past years. However, the fires were smaller, the Oregon State Department of Forestry reports.

A total of 348 acres burned from January to July this year, compared to 652 acres during the same period last year. For the past five years, an average of 641 acres burned during the first six months of the year.

Of the fires this year, 15 were caused by lightning, the rest were man-caused. Ten were caused by railroads, four by logging slash disposal, five by other lumber-logging causes, 38 by campers, 25 by smokers, 59 by persons carelessly burning debris, 74 by children and miscellaneous causes, and one was incendiary.

The U.S. Forest Service said smoking is prohibited while traveling in timber, brush or grass areas except when in vehicles on roads. Also, travelers—except hikers—are required to carry an axe, shovel and water container when using open campfires. The rule does not apply to camping in designated campgrounds.

There are some small closures of National Forest areas. Forest users can obtain detailed information on these at rangers stations.
