Story hours end Monday

Next Monday Mike Howell will be the story teller at the last of the summer story hours at the public library. This summer the A.A.U.W. branch has arranged the series of Monday morning story times that have run for nine weeks. This is the fourth year that this group has offered this community service in connection with the public library.

Linda Johnson and Jeanne Howell made arrangements for the following persons to tell the stories. In order of their story telling, they were: Jeanne Howell, Sally Winter, Anne Doherty, Laura Broderick, L. Dee Lorengel, Kathy Wolff, L. Dee Lorengel, again, and next week Mike Howell.

Not only the children from three to eight years have enjoyed these Monday morning sessions; their mothers have been able to meet other young mothers and observe the group of children together.

Library circulation is always at its highest in July because of the eager young readers and their mothers.

Tammy Lucas has been at the circulation table each Monday to assist Mrs. Weatherford in handling the returned books needing to be shelved and the many books to be charged out.
