

Party Line

D. Zita & Justine Weatherford

Here it is almost time to think seriously about your future leaders for the next few years...Time for a change? Those who attended the Candidates Fair were able to meet our candidates and maybe a definite answer to their voting. However, I'm happy to see that our local candidates have not gotten to the lower depths of mud-slinging that Carter-Ford have. There seems to be no longer an interest of what the President will do for his country...just too busy answering each other...

Chuck and Kay Marquardt's abode is now quietly serene this week. Kay's mother and father, Carroll and Clara Priestley, Bend, were here visiting and pheasant hunting for a week. The weekend brought Kay's brother and wife, Dick and Ann Priestley, with 2 more couples of friends from Portland.

Ferida Majeske has just returned from Prineville, where she attended the Patriarch's Militant Rally of the IOOF Department of Oregon, as an Honor Guard. Mary McMurry, Catie Patberg, and Florence McMillian also attended the weekend Rally.

Ferida returned recently from Wausau, WI, where she visited with her nieces and nephews for three weeks.

Coles House of Fashion will be holding their Jack O'Lantern contest this October 27. The kindergarten through 2nd graders get to decorate a pumpkin and maybe win a prize. Last year the contest was a "pumpkin" of a success, and Carolyn Cole anticipates a window-full of pumpkins this year.

Arthur Crawford, Ione, was a recent Alaska visitor, spending ten days in our northernmost state. While there, he spent several days with his niece and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Vern Almon, Anchorage. He also visited Nome and Kotzebue. He crossed the arctic circle, receiving his certificate. Arthur then went to Fairbanks, and from there returned to Portland, where he spent three days before returning home.

The annual MOONLITE SALE will be held Monday, October 25, for 2 hours. This sale always has lots of merchandise marked down from regular stock. A thought, and I hate to be the one who mentions Christmas shopping first, but...by taking advantage of this sale, you could cut down that shopping list and that big, big dent in the pocketbook.

The celebrating Methodists felt so lucky that the heavy frost held off just long enough for them to have lovely dahlias from Amanda Duvall's yard in the church on their Centennial Sunday. The dahlias didn't freeze until that very night.

Visiting Frances Parker Mitchell and long-time members Louise Moyer Wood and Ella Smith showed that they have kept their weight down enough to wear very old dresses. Frances wore a roaring twenties model, and Ella and Louise wore even older things. In fact, dainty Louise and handsome big John Wood were the best dressed couple. She wore an old, long, ruffled taffeta skirt, fancy white blouse, dainty black shawl and had lovely old accessories, including black mitten-gloves made in the 1890s; John looked great in his fine, dark suit.

Visitors at the County Museum have kept Rachel Harnett on summer hours. Last weekend, many Methodists, including Bishop Jack Tuell, had high praise for the museum and the Democrat Gulch School. Rachel says she wants to know when interested out-of-town visitors come. She so graciously will come to open the museum for them.

Meet re-scheduled

The monthly meetings of the Heppner Library Board are now scheduled for the fourth Wednesday evening of each month.

At the October meeting, the board members decided that Wednesday night would be more convenient than the Thursday evening meetings that had prevailed for many years.

Therefore, the board will convene at the library next week, Wednesday, October 27, at 8 p.m. The library will not be open to the public at that time, although the board meetings are open to the public.

LET GO!

"If any man would come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." Mark 8:34, R.S.V.

A group of monkeys, living in the tall jungle trees of India, were playing follow-the-leader on a long vine that stretched from one tree to another. Just as they were swinging to a nearby branch, the lead monkey spotted two men in the grassy clearing below. The curious monkeys watched them drive many stakes into the ground, and then tie coconut shells to the stakes. As soon as the men left, the lead monkey, followed by the others, scampered down to the clearing. All around were big empty shells tied by a short piece of cord to the stakes. On top of each shell was a hole just large enough for a monkey's hand. It didn't take long for the inquisitive monkeys to slip their hands into the holes to see what was inside. In each shell was a handful of rice. Eagerly each monkey grabbed all he could hold.

But when they tried to pull out their fists filled with rice, their hands wouldn't slip through the small hole. Not wanting to let go of the rice, they held tight and pulled, but to no avail.

Soon all the monkeys were jumping up and down excitedly, chattering to each other loudly. When the two men, who had been hiding in the bushes appeared, the monkeys pulled all the harder and screamed out their frantic protests. But none let go of the rice so they could flee. Quickly the men threw nets over them and caught them all. They were put in cages in the back of a truck, to begin a trip across the ocean to spend the rest of their lives as captives in a zoo.

You say, Foolish monkeys, why didn't they let go? What about you? Have you let go of those things that keep you from escaping to Christ? Are you more concerned with glorifying self through modern fashions than with the glorification of Christ? Do TV programs so engross your free moments that you are deprived of time to spend with and for God? Your handfuls of rice could be money, approval of your friends above God, the acquisition of property, or a cherished habit to which you cling. Are you so intent on holding tight to these that you are willing to give up eternal life with Jesus? Look at your hands before you blame the monkeys. Are they empty and uplifted to God?

Jesus' answer is clear. Deny yourself. Take the cross I put in your hands. Follow Me. Your answer? "Yes, Lord, by Your grace."

Extension news

The spotlight of fashion will point to Boardman on Saturday, October 30th, where the annual Make It Yourself With Wool Contest will be held this year. All indications are that it will be the biggest contest in recent years. Special events are planned for both participants and their mothers. Luncheon will be provided at the Greenfield Grange Hall. Mothers will be treated to a tour of the famous Kennedy home. Special instruction and fashion tips will be given all the participants after the judging.

The public is invited to attend the public fashion show at Riverside High School, Boardman, 1:30 p.m. Girls will model their garments at this time, and awards and winners will be announced. One girl from the group will be selected district winner, to participate in the State Contest in December.

A special treat is in store for homemakers in this area, Tuesday evening, October 26th, 7:30 p.m. Flora Johnson will be coming to town to share her culinary expertise, this time on the subject of delectable desserts. Ms. Johnson will be remembered as the one who delighted audiences last year with her skills and hints on making sourdough products.

The program, open to all interested, will be presented in the home economics room at Heppner High School. Her favorite basic recipes for two types of puff pastries will be available, but "bring along some note paper," reports Birdine Tullis, Extension Service. "She will have many ideas you will want to note down." Ms. Johnson promises samples of all her goodies!

All are reminded that reservations for the Extension sponsored tour to the Trojan nuclear plant and Portland are due in by October 25th. Any interested men and women are invited to join the bus tour. Cost for transportation is $8.50. Sack lunches should be carried along, with coffee provided by Portland General Electric Company. Dinner will be "on your own" in Portland prior to departure home. There will be time in downtown Portland to explore the new developments there, shop, or whatever you wish. Guide for the Trojan tour will be Bus Clough of PGE. Birdine Tullis and Harold Kerr, Extension Service, will accompany the tour group.

Ione Grange sets meeting

Have you ever wondered what Grange is all about?

If you'd like to know, this fraternal agriculture organization from Ione cordially invites you to booster night on October 23.

A pot luck dinner at 6:30 p.m. at the Grange Hall will be followed by a lecturer's program at 8 p.m. The lectures are designed to help answer questions as well as offer entertainment.

Two keynote speakers are slated for the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Keith Strunts of district 6, which they represent as State Grange Youth Representatives, will be the speakers.

Lecturer Wilma Martin has also planned a free card party and game evening after the program.

It is Willow Grange's only open night of the year to learn and enjoy an entertaining program. All grangers invite their fellow grangers and non-grangers alike to the meeting.
