

Around About

with Justine Weatherford

There are several completely unscientific reasons for rain finally falling on Morrow County. Old timers say that back when large sheep-shearing crews made their rounds—it seemed to always rain just as the shearers arrived. Then the ranch family had that crew to house and feed while the men sat out the rain.

Now we know that hanging out a big washing or washing cars and windows seems to encourage rain. However, this week several big special events surely brought on the sprinkling.

First, the grand opening of the Little League Baseball season took place on Saturday with appropriate ceremonies. It seems that "Grandpa" Albert Connor had the honor of throwing out the first ball. "Dad" Dean Connor is assistant coach for the Dodger team and grandson and son Greg is the Dodger pitcher. With this three generation lineup, it was a surprise to have the Dodgers lose their opener to the Indians, 5 to 4.

Perhaps even a bigger rain-bringing effort is the annual sixth grade outdoor camping experience taking place at Cutsforth Park this week. All the sixth graders were asked to earn their camp expenses. This took effort and planning. Their teachers and Gladys Van Winkle, the chief cook from Heppner Elementary, accompanied the group on this week of outdoor living experience.

We understand that this paper is losing its former editor and outstanding sports writer, Wil C. Phinney. Never before Wil's stay here have county sports events had the tremendous news coverage that Wil has given them. He writes with zest and knowledge of all sports events.

The Heppner High Rodeo performers got a chance to do their stuff last Saturday and Sunday at Rufus. Some did well and some not so well, we hear. The baseball fellows brought home a victory over Condon and the boy track experts came back with the winning total points from the meet at Boardman.

The big high school event of the weekend was, of course, Heppner's annual junior-senior banquet and prom.

It sure seemed strange, but great, to use the windshield wipers on the car again. We hope our early garden plantings are encouraged by their first rain experience. We know there is such desperate need for lots more of the wetting.

Children's story hour Wednesday

The Heppner Child Development Center has arranged with the Heppner Library for story hours for three, four and five year old children on Wednesday mornings during the rest of May and all of June. Center director Chloe Pearson announces that the last two Wednesdays the children from the center and their teachers, Sally Winters and Cindi Doherty, have enjoyed story hours from 10 to 11 a.m. in the library's Children's Room.

invite mothers to come with their children to join the group.

Thompson's return home

Madge and Jim Thomson are back in town after a fine week's vacation in California. They flew to Los Angeles to visit their daughter, Meredith Walters, her husband Tom, twin sons Ammon and Aaron, 2, and older brothers Duane and Russell.

Share a recipe for Cowbelle book

What's the specialty at your house? Are you willing to share your family's favorite recipe?

A new project of Morrow County Cowbelles, as a part of their 20th Anniversary, will be publishing a cookbook of favorite recipes of Morrow County cooks. They hope to include recipes from all areas of the county, and invite and encourage women and men to submit their favorites.

Plans are to have the book ready for distribution by county fair time.

Recipes may be for any food, either original recipes, or just family favorites.

Names will be included with the recipes in the book. Anyone with a brand submitting recipes is asked to include a sketch of their brand, also to be used with the name and recipe. While the Cowbelles hope for many good beef recipes, they also would like desserts, salads, and other family favorites.

Send or bring recipes to Susie French, Cowbelles' president, Heppner, or to Birdine Tullis, Extension Service Office, Heppner.
