There's no doubt Heppner area youth are glad the City Council and concerned citizens got together and worked out a solution for keeping the pool open. The Heppner Lions Club raised enough money to satisfy city needs and at a budget meeting Monday evening the City Council adopted a budget that included swim pool operations. A complete schedule of swim pool hours will be published in next week's edition of the Gazette-Times. Pool Manager Tom Franks said he thinks there will be swim time available for everyone.

Info-Cards to curb vandalism

In an increased effort to help enforce Oregon's fish and game laws and to report vandals and other violators, four state groups are joining forces to help bring about arrests and convictions.

The Department of Fish and Wildlife, the State Police, the state division of the Izaak Walton League and SOLV (Stop Oregon Litter and Vandalism) are helping to distribute wallet-size cards making it easier to provide information on suspected vandals, poachers and other violators.

"Would-be vandals and violators may be deterred from their acts when they realize that soon there will be 40,000 card carriers in the outdoors to discourage the law breaker from his illegal acts," said Joseph Bennett who prepared the cards for the Izaak Walton League.

Bennett cited recent examples that have disgusted the public: repeated break-ins and vandalism at Crown Point on the scenic Columbia River; illegal gillnetting in the Columbia and Willamette Rivers; snagging of fish in Oregon's low coastal streams due to the drought poaching of deer and elk; bullet damage to transformers and power lines; break-ins and damage to vacation cabins; destruction of farmers' gates, fences and barns; littering of highways and trails, and arson fires. Oregon's dry weather makes it more important than ever to be extremely careful with fire.

Thefts of cedar logs from Federal and private timberlands have been reported lately, which has involved the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The State and private landowners continue to have trouble with off-road vehicles causing road damage, erosion and flooding in the Tillamook forest and other areas. Ranchers and tree farmers still experience litter problems including illegal rubbish dumping, a serious fire hazard. And vandals continue to destroy rest room facilities, picnic tables, signs, lawns, shrubs and trees, in addition to costly destruction of public school property.

Locally, Vic Groshens of the Oregon State Police said the most common problem he has seen is vandalism—especially in the county's two park areas. Groshens said the information cards should go a long way towards curbing the illegal acts and added that he had a good supply of the cards available to the public at his house.

Cards are also available at the IZAAK Walton League office in Portland, the State Police Building in Salem, the Fish and Wildlife Department in Portland and the Western Forestry Center in Portland.
