

Artifactory offers gift variety

Handcrafted for every person on every Christmas shopping list from baby through grandpa will be available at the Artifactory coming up on Saturday, Dec. 3, at the Catholic Parish Hall in Heppner.

Space for fifty different tables have been reserved so far; while many craftsmen will provide variations on a similar theme, about 20 separate gift categories will be offered.

Craft items to be sold include metal art, wooden toys, tree ornaments and Christmas wreaths, baked goods, macrame, hand crafted jewelry, stuffed animals, dried flower arrangements, apple head dolls, stained glass, patchwork pillows and wall hangings, handpainted china, pottery, tole painted items and beadwork.

Artists' work from the all-day Morrow County Creative Art Show will also be for sale.

For persons who prefer to make their own gifts, demonstrations for different craft items are scheduled throughout the day.

Jolly ol' Santa Claus will be present to add to the festive air of the occasion and he'll listen to the Christmas requests of all the young ones in the family. Beta Gamma, Heppner's newest community service group, will take photographs of the youngsters with Santa from 1 to 3 p.m. Parents are also invited to bring their own cameras.

The Kiddie Corner will attract the children with special demonstrations geared to their level. A craft table will be set up so they can make such things as Christmas items out of felt and Christmas tree chains out of colored-paper or popcorn and cranberries. Not a babysitting service, the Corner is intended to be a child-oriented, mini-Artifactory.

The Lions Club will sell popcorn, while the American Association of University Women will offer pie, coffee and used books.

To provide an appropriate backdrop for the community event, Christmas carolers directed by John Dawson will sing throughout the day.

Heppner volunteer firemen don air masks before entering a smoke-filled house. A faulty flue was blamed for the fire on Aiken Street last Friday.

Flue fire doused Friday

A Friday morning flue fire in an Aiken Street home brought the Heppner Volunteer Fire Department out in full force and it took the firefighters only about 10 minutes to get the blaze under control.

All three pumpers arrived on the scene about 10 a.m. after a call came in of a fire in the home occupied by Lynn and Glenda Colvert. With one hose in operation, the fire was soon extinguished but members of the fire department remained in the house another hour to be sure all traces of the fire in the wall were gone.

Fire Chief Forrie Burkenbine pinned the blame on a faulty flue leading from a wood heater and estimated the damages to be a couple of thousand dollars. He cautioned all residents with wood heating set ups to be sure and have plenty of heat resistant material between the heater and the wall.

Chimneys should be checked for cracks, loose bricks, proper flue lining, soot deposits, creosote coating, bird nests, bee hives and other obstructions.

Topic club hears of Tut treasures

Ione Topic Club met at the home of Rose Baker on Wednesday November 17 with Helen Proudfoot assisting.

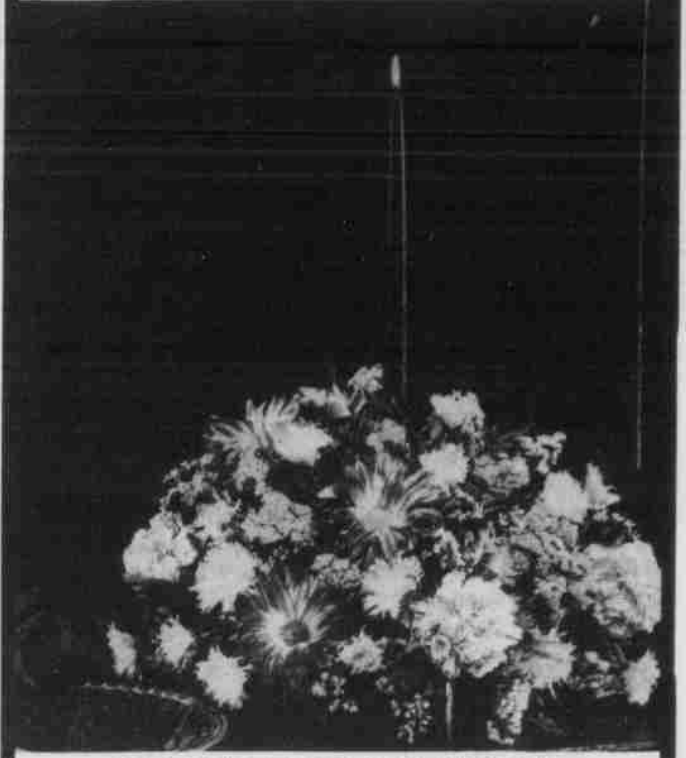

Helen gave an interesting report on "The Treasures of King Tut's Tomb". An expedition sponsored by the Earl of Carverton located King Tut's tomb at Luxor in the Valley of the Kings in 1922 after searching fifteen years. King Tutankhamun died very suddenly at 19 years of age and had to be buried in a commoner's tomb. The tomb is best known for the many artifacts covered with gold and the solid gold death mask of King Tut. An exhibit of the treasures of King Tut's tomb is appearing in museums through out the United States and can be seen from July 15 to September 1 in Seattle.
