

Norman Clow returns from Georgia training session

Norman Clow, a U.S. Fish & Wildlife employe working out of the Umatilla Refuge, returned recently from a three-week training course at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center, Glencoe, Georgia.

The center provides training and instruction to all federal law enforcement agencies, including the FBI, the CIA, the IRS, the Border Patrol, Game Commissions, park police and White House guards. All facets of law enforcement and crime prevention, including firearms, self-defense, drugs, rape, smuggling and court procedures are covered in the course.

Clow said a lot of crime takes place on game refuges and that he is very glad to be working on a game area in Eastern Oregon rather than in one of the more populated states.

The training center is located about 60 miles from the Okefenokee Swamp and all the Game Commission men got to spend a day going through a portion of the nation's largest swamp.

Clow has worked nearly 20 years for the U.S. Government, having spent 19 years with the Forest Service before starting to work for the Fish & Wildlife Department last summer.

He and his family moved to Irrigon last week after living in Heppner for the past 12 years. His wife, Bonnie, has her own dog grooming business and their Black Butte Kennels have produced champion Brittany Spaniels. She plans to continue the grooming business in Irrigon.

In State-wide testing

Student skills gauged

Heppner High School juniors and Riverside seventh graders will be tested on their computing skills while lone seventh graders will take a reading test during the week beginning Feb. 27. The examinations are part of the State-wide Testing Assessment presently underway.

The county schools were asked to participate in the testing, designed to find out exactly how much Oregon students know in three areas—reading, writing and computing. Approximately 12,500 fourth graders, 16,000 seventh graders and 19,000 juniors in Oregon are taking part in the assessment with one-third of each grade level tested in one of the three areas.

The tests are set up to gauge a student's ability to apply his knowledge in a practical situation, reflecting an effort by Oregon Schools and the State Board of Education to better adapt education to life after schooling is completed.

Students tested will receive the results of the assessment and teachers will use them to help shape their instructional programs.

Questions about the assessment may be directed to Mike Witherell, Riverside High School; Jerry Martin, Ione Junior High School; or Vi Lanham, Assessment Coordinator, at Heppner High School.

Mural photo exhibit set for HHS library

An exhibit of color photographs of murals from the east Los Angeles area will be on display at the Heppner High School Library Feb. 24 through March 17.

East Los Angeles has become one of the centers of the new mural movement in American Cities. The murals represented in the exhibit were painted by many different artists and have many themes, often connected with the community's close ties with Mexican history and culture. Some of the murals make social or political statements. Some show street scenes from the past and present, while others aim only to please the eye with bright colors and bold designs.

Ricardo Garcia, an Oregon resident originally from east Los Angeles, returned home in 1975 to photograph the murals. A selection of the photographs he took is being circulated by visual arts resources, a part of the University of Oregon Museum of Art in Eugene. Visual arts resources programs are supported by the Oregon Arts Commission, the National Endowment for the Arts, the University of Oregon, and other private and public agencies.
