AROUND ABOUT

with Justine Weatherford

Last week four Heppnerites traveled to Ashland to see six tremendous plays in four busy days. Jane Rawlins had made the reservations for the plays and for S.O.C. dormitory accommodations many months ago. We found that every play was very well attended—the evening Shakespearean dramas in the Elizabethan Theater above lovely Lithia Park were even selling standing space.

It seems to me that the presentations become more exciting each year. This year the staging and costuming was superb, greatly augmenting the usual excellent acting. The Bard's The Tempest, The Tragedy of King Richard III and The Taming of The Shrew were in the outside theater, and even though it sprinkled a little as the last two of these got underway, the audience and the acting and producing company seemed not to notice the moisture.

Timon of Athens was presented for only the second time in the years since the festival was founded in 1935 by Angus L. Bowmer and friends, and this year's performance of Timon was in the elegant theater named for the founder.

We had tickets to two other plays in the Bowmer Theater, Tartuffe by Moliere and Mother Courage and Her Children by Brecht. We did not attend Strindberg's Miss Julie in the Bowmer or the two modern plays in the Black Swan—Zindel's The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-In-The-Moon Marigolds or Enquist's Night of The Tribades. We enjoyed visiting the new Festival Exhibit Center and taking the very educational Back Stage Tour.

We traveled highways 80-N and I-5 both ways. Along 80-N it was noted that the Columbia was low just now (possibly recent rains will bring it up again.) Both highways are heavily trafficked—so many recreational vehicles along with the big trucks and ordinary cars. On I-5 we were pleased to stop at several of the state-maintained Rest Areas which are being used by multitudes.

Pear picking is approaching its seasonal high around Medford. I was able to have two good visits with my second son and family in their home and to see several places of high interest to me in Medford while the rest of the tour group saw historic Jacksonville. We all found that the Ashland shops have enlarged their offerings and seem more delightful than ever before.
