

BELLAMY: the working man

Bill Bellamy has always worked. He has served as news editor and secretary of the Oregon Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association. He was named the outstanding young ag teacher for Oregon last year. In college, Bill Bellamy was named the outstanding sophomore in agriculture and the outstanding young man in education. In high school, he was a state FFA officer and later received the American Farmer Degree.

Those are just some of the awards Bill Bellamy has accumulated in 28 years of working.

Bill Bellamy has had to work hard for everything. He held his first job when he was 12. Four years later when his mother died he and his dad were responsible for raising four brothers and three sisters. As the oldest in the family, Bill Bellamy learned what it was like to make it on his own.

He has held a variety of jobs while growing up. Bill Bellamy worked for the Sherman County Journal, The Sherman Branch Experiment Station, Moro Grain Growers and the Heppner Lumber Company. In addition, he helped some of the Sherman County farmers harvest their crops.

His ties to agriculture helped him decide to become a vocational ag instructor. He graduated from Oregon State University in agricultural education. He has since completed his Masters Degree in agricultural education with minors in forestry, range management and education.

Six years ago, Culver High School hired Bill Bellamy as the vocational ag instructor. At Culver he is a respected member of the community. He has developed a working relationship with the local people, the students and the faculty.

His personal goals have centered around his students achieving awards and recognition in the FFA. He takes pride watching them develop careers in the agricultural occupations.

Bill Bellamy is active. He enjoys traveling, meeting new people and maintaining contact with many close friends throughout the state. When time permits, he trains his horse and tools leather.

Campaign Chairmen tell their story

"I support Bill Bellamy for District 55 Representative because he supports the political ideal's and goals that most east Clackamas County residents believe in. Let's all Support Bill Bellamy."

Estacada

"Bill Bellamy has demonstrated outstanding leadership ability which means he listens to what other people say. He also carefully considers the facts before making a decision and then he will stand behind what he believes. Bill Bellamy will work hard at representing the people of this district. 'Honesty and sincerity' are two of Bill Bellamy's qualities. I know from personal experience."

Micheal Weimer
Arlington

Bill Bellamy is a sincere, enthusiastic young man who knows this area and the problems and concerns facing the people. We feel he has the talent and ability to represent District 55 in a fair and competent manner and will be an asset to the State and the people he represents.
