

New grazing land bill will aid Eastern Oregon production, Ullman says

Oregon Congressman Al Ullman says the public range-lands improvement act signed into law last week by President Carter will substantially increase the productivity of eastern Oregon.

"In addition, all users of public grazing lands will benefit significantly," said Ullman, a cosponsor of the comprehensive range improvement measure.

The new law authorizes considerably expanded federal rehabilitation of the public lands and overhauls the grazing fee leasing formula, which has been a source of continuing controversy.

The measure establishes a formula that, for the first time, reflects livestock production costs, beef prices and ranchers' ability to pay.

"This will allow the fee charged for grazing livestock to rise and fall with economic conditions, rather than be set arbitrarily by the federal government," Ullman said. Another important provision of the measure expands the Bureau of Land Management program to control excess wild horses and burros and immediately remove the excess population.

The legislation also streamlines the procedure for adopting the animals by providing for a transfer of title to the adopter after one year of demonstrated humane treatment.

Heppner wins homecoming

demonstrated that they were alive and well. Heppner averaged almost 15 yards per punt return. Bryan Marlin averaged 33 yards per boot in five punts.

Neither team fumbled the ball or intercepted a pass during the homecoming matchup.

With the CBC championship now cinched, motivation for Friday's game against Condon may be a problem, Sporseen admits. "I hope they're not thinking too much about the playoffs—I know I'm not, I'm just looking to Condon...I sure wouldn't want to go into the playoffs just after a loss, and Condon will be tough."

Although the Mustangs have seen playoff action once every four years since 1966, Heppner has never advanced past the quarterfinals stage.

This year, Heppner will have to beat the winner of the Wapiti League in order to advance further. Elgin and Enterprise will square off Friday night in a showdown to determine the Wapiti League championship.

The Hall at Camp Five was the scene of a pinochle party Saturday evening.

The Camp Five Women's Club was the sponsor, with all profits of this and later parties going into the club's scholarship fund. The ladies are also selling tickets for an AM-FM radio with the money going into the same fund.

Winners of prizes at Saturday's party included Roger Mortimore and Andrea Campbell, pinochle; highs, Virginia Sitton and Doug Pope; lows, Luella Taylor and Mike Crimmon. The door prize was won by Rose Hardwick. The 22 players present finished off the evening with a meal of spaghetti and garlic bread.

Another pinochle party will be held in November at a time to be announced later.

Sue and Dan Korning and infant daughter went to John Day this weekend to help Dan's parents, Curtis and Edie Korning, celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary. Dan and Sue took the honored couple out to dinner and presented them with a beautifully decorated cake made by Karen Cossitt of Fossil.

Cleve Robbins has ended his 25-year residence in Kinzua. Cleve went to Portland a week ago Friday to pick up his brother who arrived by plane from his home in Arkansas. The brothers left Kinzua that weekend for Elkins, Ark., where Clive will now make his home.

Martin and Claudene Stockton and children went to Soquel, Calif., two weeks ago on Thursday. They visited with friends in the area before returning home on Monday.

Bill (Ivory) and Gladys Jewell, former Kinzua residents recently moved from Lexington to Heppner.

Mike and Sandra Crismon had quite a busy weekend. The Crismons and three children went to Pendleton Saturday for eye care for son Cody. On Saturday Mike's sister and family—Diane and Doug Pope of John Day—arrived to spend the weekend. Doug is recovering from injuries received when a rolling log knocked him into a saw while working for a John Day company.

They went to Baker on business Oct. 14. They were accompanied home by her father Frank Stoll. Don and Ross drove to Pendleton Oct. 25 to take the bus home.
