

Erin Evans named runner-up in state Sew With Wool contest

Modeling for the Portland Chamber of Commerce meeting at the Benson Hotel in Portland was one of the highlights for two Morrow County girls as they competed for honors in the state Make It Yourself With Wool Contest last Monday.

Chosen for a special honor and a $25 bond for the best coordination of color and style in the contest was Erin Evans, Irrigon.

Erin was also first runner up in the senior division, which makes her eligible to attend the national convention if senior winner Susan McGill, 23, of Stayton should choose not to participate in the national contest. Erin's prize as runner up in the senior contest was a 50 bond.

Diann Morter of Ione, the smallest and youngest contestant in the junior division, received a sewing book and woolen materials as her reward for competing, in addition to three days in Portland, which included attending the ice follies, special luncheons and events. Junior winner in the contest was Julie Williams, Hood River.

Erin, a 17-year-old senior at Riverside High, chose black and red 100 per cent wool for her two-piece dress, and topped it with a bright red challis busby jacket. Her outfit was completed with a white linen collar, and a hat perfectly matched to her red jacket.

Diann's outfit was the "Annie Hall" look in subdued, green flannel, high waisted pants with suspenders, topped with a color-coordinated plaid spencer jacket. Diann completed her outfit with camel boots and a stoker cap she

Census of handicapped students is underway

Annually the school districts of the State of Oregon conduct a census of handicapped children ages 3-21 receiving or in need of special education.

The report of handicapped children results in the provision of federal funds allocated under Public Law 94-142 for school district special education.

In Morrow County the services of a physical therapist, an occupational therapist and a deaf education specialist are made available with the school district's share of the federal funds provided by the Education of All Handicapped Law.

Anyone interested in learning more about the special education programs of the Morrow County Schools is urged to contact the school principal in their community or the school district office in Lexington.

made herself.

The Portland Chamber of Commerce spotlighted their agriculture day with a special salute to the sheepgrowers by including the Wool Contest as part of their meeting. Phil Farrell of Madras, National Wool Growers Board Chairman, presented the girls to the group. The Portland Chamber's special agricultural awards were also presented during the meeting.

Regular blood pressure clinics will be held before meals at Irrigon on Monday, Dec. 18, at Heppner on Tuesday, Dec. 19 and at Ione on Wednesday, Dec. 20.

Director Pat Brindle of the Heppner Neighborhood Center states that not many who received the about 60 Christmas basket letters which were sent out by the center have returned their forms. These must be returned to the center very soon.

Ms. Brindle also reminds folks that canned food is being collected in special boxes at each of the local churches to help fill Christmas baskets for the needy of the area. These boxes will be collected after Sunday, Dec. 17.

The menus for the senior meals in Morrow County next week include: at Irrigon on Monday, Dec. 18: baked turkey roll and dressing, ambrosia salad, relishes, cranberries, green beans, hot rolls and pumpkin squares with topping. At Heppner, Tuesday, Dec. 19: hot dinner sandwiches, mashed potatoes, green beans, cole slaw, and tapioca pudding with lopping. At Ione and Heppner, Wednesday, Dec. 20: baked turkey roll and dressing, mashed potatoes and gravy, ambrosia salad, green beans, relishes, cranberries, hot rolls and pumpkin squares

 The Corps of Engineers returned from a study of the flood plains in the Ione area with a report that the flood plains are larger than previously thought. The study was conducted by the Corps of Engineers, which is responsible for the flood control program in the area. The report indicates that the flood plains are larger than previously thought, and that the flood control program should be expanded to include these areas. This is good news for the towns of Ione and Heppner, which have been affected by flooding in the past. The Corps of Engineers is currently working on a plan to expand the flood control program to include these areas, and it is hoped that this will help to prevent future flooding in the area.

Parent-teacher group organ...

Drug abuse communication between parents and teachers, trustees, and attendance were major concerns voiced by those attending an organizational meeting of concerned Parents and Teachers Monday evening at Heppner Elementary School. Barbara James and Paul Sumner, organizers of the group, told the audience of more than 35 persons they discussed a parent-teacher group to work on all problems affecting the school system. Mrs. James said primary areas of concern were a lack of discipline in the schools and drug abuse, which included both consumption of alcohol and marijuana. Sumner was elected president of the organization, with Mrs. James as secretary. The group will begin work on the problem and a meeting with the school administrators and a group of parents will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the elementary school. The next meeting will be held on Friday, Dec. 15, at 7:30 p.m. in the elementary school. The group will be presenting questions. Chamber outlines lighting contest

Heppner residents and churches are participating in the Chamber of Commerce Christmas Contest—but those interested in having their display must return a coupon that appears in this week's issue. First, second and third place cash awards are $50, $20, and $10 respectively for first, second and third place. To be eligible for a prize, interested persons should clip the coupon that appears on page 16 of this week's Gazette-Times and return it to the Chamber at the address given on the coupon. Judging will be done on Sunday evening, Dec. 17 and entries forms should be returned to the Chamber before Friday, Dec. 15. Displays in the residential division should be on the exterior of the home or in plain view of the street if displayed in a window. Entries will be judged on originality and uniqueness as well as overall attractiveness.

Audit shows loss

Charges to patients covered only 54 per cent of the expenses involved. Lab charges covered 92 per cent of costs, and nursing service charges covered 88 per cent of costs. Hospital services showing profits included x-ray work which made 20 per cent above costs; drug sales, 27 per cent above costs, and emergency room service, 19 per cent above costs. Finch's accounting firm recommended seven points of change that would serve to improve hospital financial operations and controls. The recommendations included steps to avoid duplication in patient accounts records, the handling of all business office personnel, and requiring supervisors to initial payroll records. Byrnes told the board while revenue taken in for patient services rose 26 per cent from the previous year, rising health care costs and other considerations resulted in a net loss of $45,762 for Pioneer Memorial Hospital at the end of fiscal year 1978 on June 30. The financial information was made available Tuesday night by accountant Glee Finch of Beaverton, in presentation of the annual audit report to the hospital's board of trustees. Hospital services cost patients a total of $366,600 during FY 1978, up from $344,497 the previous year. Nursing home care cost $88,282 during the fiscal year recently ended, up from $89,746. Costs for providing services totaled $387,533 at the end of FY 1978, up from $323,367 the previous year. The financial report showed that the hospital's nursing cover expenses, accounting for a deficit of roughly $22,000. The daily base charge needed to break even for nursing home care was estimated at $29.41. Finch estimated that at the end of the 1978 fiscal year, the daily break-even rate would rise to $31.75 per day. The hospital's nursing home rates have been under fire for being too high during recent meetings of the hospital board. Finch indicated to the board that it would make sounder financial sense to raise rates to come closer to meeting costs. Welfare agencies currently pay a maximum of less than $23 per day for nursing home residents of the hospital. Hospital administrator Bob Byrnes reported that admissions to Pioneer Memorial were down 48 per cent from a year ago, with the average rate of occupancy down from 43 per cent to 26 per cent—the lowest it's been in years.

Sumner wins election suit; general election questioned

Defeated District 33 Rep Jack Sumner last week won his lawsuit charging Democratic rival Chuck Bennett with making false campaign statements. Sumner's victory in Marion County Circuit Court has opened the door to a bid by the Heppner Democrat to invalidate Bennett's primary nomination, possibly November general election as well. Legal and political observers can only speculate on whether Sumner may be able to retain his seat in the Oregon House of Representatives, since there is no legal precedent for the issue. The matter would likely have to be settled in the Oregon Court of Appeals. Although the Marion County jury ruled in Sumner's favor last week, the Morrow County politician did not receive as sweeping a judgement as he was seeking. Sumner had filed for $10,000 in general damages and $25,000 in punitive damages from Bennett, who defeated him during the May primary. The jury awarded only $147 in money in punitive damages. According to the Salem Statesman-Journal, the jury deliberated for more than seven hours on 12 statements Bennett was alleged to have made before ruling that two of them constituted "lies" in violation of election laws. The statements involved Bennett's un-

The audit noted that the hospital's "accounting, statistical and reporting procedures have shown considerable improvement over the prior year," and that "our review disclosed no weaknesses that we considered significant in relation to the audit of the financial statements." In other developments Tuesday, the hospital board voted to approve a grievance procedure for employees, that would include establishing a "hospital relations committee" consisting of three non-administrative employees. The committee would attempt to resolve disputes between workers and management that cannot be handled at the supervisor-employee level. The committee would also be charged with meeting periodically with the hospital board to advise management on employee sentiment on various hospital issues. The Port of Morrow Com. assistance of...

Farm-City Banquet coming on Dec.

The annual Farm City Banquet—bringing together city folk and their country neighbors—will be held Saturday, Dec. 9 at St. Patrick's Parish Hall. The banquet is sponsored by the Morrow County Livestock Growers Association and the Heppner-Morrow County Chamber of Commerce. The banquet will be at 7 p.m. preceded by a social hour at 6 p.m. Awards for Conservation Man of the Year, Cattlemen of the Year, 4-H and FFA carcass winners, and Chamber of Commerce awards will highlight the banquet. Keynote speaker for the banquet will be Arleigh Liley, Klamath County Extension Agent, who will give a talk on the "Abundance of government regulations." Birdline Tullis, home extension agent for Morrow County, is organizing the event. The Livestock Growers Association will be the main attraction.
