

BMCC slates activities for Feb. 26 eclipse of sun

A total solar eclipse will occur over the Pendleton area the morning of Feb. 26, and Blue Mountain Community College is planning special activities before and during the event.

The eclipse may be seen the morning of Feb. 26 in the southern skies. At about 7 a.m. the eclipse will begin and will reach totality at 8:17 a.m. Totality will last about two minutes.

"In most people's lifetimes, they are lucky to see just one total solar eclipse," according to Ellsworth Mayer, former astronomy instructor and BMCC dean of academic planning and research.

"The Astronomical World and Eclipses" will be explored in a special evening class to be offered at BMCC prior to the eclipse in February.

Mayer and Alan Insko, physics instructor, plan a four-class series with the final class being the actual viewing of the eclipse. Two evening sessions are planned which will cover topics such as: a general introduction to astronomy, an over-view of the solar system, how eclipses occur, and the geometry of eclipses.

Then, on Sunday, Feb. 25, the day before the eclipse, groups from out of the area who have come to view the eclipse will be presenting their planned activities. At present, Lane and Clackamas Community Colleges have inquired about sending teams to BMCC.

Additional inquiries have come to the college from Cyprus College in California. Individuals from Nevada, North Carolina and California also plan to travel to Pendleton.

Finally, the class will view the eclipse from the BMCC campus the morning of Feb. 26. Class participants may attend the entire four-class sequence for one hour of college credit at a cost of $9.

The class is also open on an informational basis to people who cannot attend all events. There is no cost for dropping in on a session.

Mayer warns, "Viewers of the eclipse must be careful to not do much with the naked eye."

His warning is echoed by the national Astronomical League which states, "Staring at the sun with unprotected eyes during the partial stages of the eclipse can cause blindness or severe retinal damage."

Safety precautions are being taken by the college to help eclipse viewers protect their eyes. A Questar telescope with a solar filter will be set up so that viewers may view sunspots and solar corona during the eclipse. Indirect viewing of the eclipse will be accomplished using projection devices that will show the eclipse on a screen.

For more information on the eclipse class or viewing plans, contact the Evening Division at Blue Mountain Community College, P.O. Box 100, Pendleton, Oregon 97801 or call 276-1260, ext. 205. Mayer and Insko are also available at the college to answer questions.

1977," said Giustina. The reason the Department estimates were low in the period 71-73 was because of market changes which occurred after their estimates were made. After their estimates were made, the market conditions changed and what was once waste started to be hauled out of the woods and utilized, thus increasing the amount finally harvested.

The Department noted this increase in utilization in 1973 and in 1974 and corrected their estimates. If the auditors had checked the sales sold by the state since 1974, they would have seen that the Department's estimates were very close to the amount of timber actually removed.
