Irrigon news

Francis Rose

Dale Hurn of Irrigon, who is a river boat captain for Columbia River Lines, was tied up at Hood River for three days, while the locks on the river were frozen. He is moving again and his barge passed Irrigon this week.

Mrs. Myrtle McNamee fell on the ice and is in St. Anthony's hospital in Pendleton with a broken hip.

Richard and Virginia Franke have moved to Irrigon from Portland. He is employed by Mid-Columbia Construction of McNary and will be on a job in Aberdeen, Wash., for a while. His wife and son will remain here.

The principal business conducted at the Irrigon Planning Commissions January meeting, dealt with an annexation request.

George Waltman, one of four partners in a development proposal appeared before the commission requesting annexation and presenting preliminary plans for the first phase of a two-part plan for development.

The two tracts lie west of First Street, with one consisting of 4.17 acres lying North of California Avenue, and the second lying South of California Avenue in an L-shaped tract of 8.84 acres.

Jeff Miller, another partner in the group explained that it is proposed to develop the first tract into a mobile home development with lot areas approximately 12,000 square feet, complete with water lines and streets. They requested that the area be zoned R-1. It is presently zoned under preliminary County planning in 1 acre plots.

The proposal was approved for processing and to present for hearings.

Senior Citizens are reminded that whenever they need legal help they should make that need known at the Neighborhood Center. The public lawyer from Pendleton stopped going to Hermiston one morning and coming to Heppner one afternoon each week because so few people in each of the towns were requesting his services. However, he is still on call, is very available and will come whenever needed and requested to come.

Seniors are also reminded that they may now pick up coupons at the Neighborhood Center which reduce the cost of the Pendleton newspaper by 50 cents each month.

Monday, January 22, the Morrow County Senior Citizens Advisory Council held its regular January meeting at 1:30 p.m. in the Columbia Basin Co-op's conference room. Council president, Ardith Hunt, Lexington, presided. Rollin Reynolds and Regina Marks, Pendleton, of the ECOAC Area Agency on Aging and Sue Jepsen, the Homemaker Program Director for Morrow, Gilliam and Wheeler Counties, along with the seniors representing county communities were in attendance.

The council secretary, Theta Lowe, had been asked to prepare a letter to be sent to county groups encouraging them to each send a representative to the monthly council meetings "to act as monitoring and evaluating agents for the senior programs and services in Morrow County." Copies of her letter were circulated and will be mailed soon. It is hoped that if more groups become aware of the senior programs, there will be better understanding and support.

Homemaker Director Jepsen reported that close to 40 persons are presently receiving homemaking help in the three counties.

Reports were given from the three mealsites. At each site attendance has been down during the cold weather. At lone and Irrigon several dinners were called off. It is understood that regular meals will be presented at all three sites from now on.

Area Nutrition Supervisor Regina Marks stressed that each mealsite council should request help from her office. She reported that some commodities which are made available under the federal program had not been picked up—and that these should be used.

She and Director Reynolds explained that HUD had transferred the commodity food responsibility from the Agriculture Department to the Area Agencies on Aging. Since these commodities are sent to the areas with the largest populations where the most need or use is shown, it is questionable how many more shipments will come to this area.

If seniors do not respond to the opportunity to come together to enjoy the nutritionally balanced meals and the fellowship which has been arranged for them and to support the mealsites with "at door" financing, the program could collapse, could stop in areas where attendance fails to grow and to justify its continuance.

The State of Oregon requests that three seniors from each area be designated to work with the legislature on problems of the ageing. Ardith Hunt appointed Truman Messenger to represent Morrow County.

The matter of senior buses was mentioned. It was stated that men from the area will go to Portland and examine the rebuilt buses before they are brought back here. It was stressed that preparations need to be made here; that qualified operators need to be readied.

Paul W. Jones reported that several more sites had been examined as possible locations for a senior center, but that so far none seemed suitable. The site committee will continue searching.

Director Reynolds praised the recent work done here with group CPR training and with discussions pertaining to medicare and supplemental insurance.

Reynolds then asked the council to fill in a survey form pertaining to legal services in the five-county ECOAC area. After considerable discussion it was decided to approve a plan to have some legal training given to county persons, or a person, who would serve as a para-legal assistant here when needed.

As the meeting adjourned it was announced that the five-county Area Agency on Aging meeting will be held at 10 a.m., February 13, in the Columbia Basin conference room here. Area President Paul W. Jones will preside.

Meals at the three sites in the county for the week of January 29 will feature the following: at Irrigon on Monday, chops in mushroom sauce, mashed potatoes, 24-hour cabbage slaw, buttered corn, biscuits and jelly and fruit cobbler.

On Tuesday at Heppner, Mexicali bake (hamburger, tomato, corn), baked squash, tossed green salad, bulgar muffins with jam and amazing coconut pie.

At Lone and Heppner on Wednesday, tomato juice, braised tips over rice, buttered spinach, Waldorf salad, cornbread and butter and lemon-jello cake with topping.
