"I'd think the Legislature would be very concerned. We should be asking why it's happening," she says.

Paulus says it may be a harbinger of the conservative mood which appears to be sweeping the country with the people calling for less government.

"Last year we were up to our hips in initiative petitions," she says. "We're hardly two months in to the 1980 cycle and we have three times as many filed."

Wheat League, Cattlemen open 'Hot Line' to Salem

A special "Hot Line" to Morrow County's representatives in Salem will be open to area residents concerned about state issues starting Monday night, thanks to the Morrow County Cattlemen's Association and the local chapter of the Oregon Wheat Growers League.

A direct-line phone link to Sen. Ken Jernstedt and Rep. Bill Bellamy will be available at the County Extension Office, starting at 7:30 p.m. Taxation has been chosen as the central topic for the first Hot Line session, but callers are welcome to discuss any issue they deem important.

The Wheat League-Cattlemen's Association Hot Line is expected to be an ongoing program, to be held every Monday night from the Extension Office.

Grandparents are Inez Meador of Harbor, Ore., formerly of Heppner, and Mr. and Mrs. Blair Sneddon of Florence. Great-grandmothers are Effie Wellman of Baker, Ennis Meador of Texas, Rhoda Sneddon of Nampa, Idaho, and Emma Goodwin of Halfway.

Heppner's spring cleanup campaign nears

Most American communities make an annual effort to clean up after each winter, to re-stimulate civic pride and to present a "smiling face" on the arrival of spring.

Monday evening, March 12, the City Beautification and Improvement Committee of the Chamber of Commerce held a planning meeting for this spring's campaign. Chairman Father Kenneth Miller, Marshal Lovgren, Ed Gonty and Gene Pierce along with interested citizens Robert Lowe, Paul Sumner and Mark Lovgren worked at planning the means of achieving civic beautification and improvement.

They agreed that citizen attitude and community desire for a good clean up are the most important and most necessary elements in a successful campaign.

Preliminary discussion focused on five areas needing considerable work: the first, the gravel problem left after the winter storms; the second, the extreme amounts of assorted litter; the third, a need to burn large areas where weeds are already a fire hazard; the fourth, the need to remove limbs, debris, weeds and litter from private and public property, and fifth, the need to eliminate graffiti from all buildings.

The weekend of March 30, 31 and April 1 has been designated for the climax of the campaign and the achievement of the goal to have a cleaner, more attractive and safer community. Each civic, fraternal and political group will be contacted by the members of the committee and asked to cooperate in the campaign.

It is hoped that the city may be divided into specific areas and that groups of perhaps six to eight persons will be committed to each area's clean up and then, if possible, to its continued inspection and upkeep.

One man has already volunteered to clean up the rubbish from the site of the Heppner Elementary School out to the city limit along Hinton Creek Road. A member of the committee has volunteered to clean the walk and adjacent area from the Public Library over the foot bridge to the Junior High School. Another member of the planning group will be contacting the school administration and staff asking to have efforts made to stimulate student cooperation and to promote more civic pride among the young people.

The committee looks forward to support from the mayor and City Council in this spring endeavor.

It is hoped that trucks will be available, along with drivers, to help carry the public-area trash and litter collections away; but not to assume the responsibility for the removal of household trash which each family will want to be removing as it works along with its own cleaning of its premises.

Another committee meeting, which all interested persons and organizational representatives are invited to attend, will be held next Monday, March 19, at 8 p.m. in the Parish of All Saints' Episcopal Church. For further details, contact Father Ken Miller at 676-9970 during the day or at 676-5158 in the evening.

Library slates storytelling class March 29

A story-telling class will be offered at the Heppner Public Library Thursday, March 29. The class is free to all interested persons.

Pre-empting the regular children's story hour for that day, Darci Dauble, a circuit rider librarian for the East Central Association of Counties (ECOAC), will offer story-telling classes at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. Each session is expected to last two hours.

The special event was organized by Heppner Librarian Bethel Henrich.

Interested participants should contact Chloe Pearson at 676-5035; Joy Krein, 676-9956 or the library, 676-9964, for registration. Babysitting services will be available at the Methodist Church for both classes.

Regular Thursday story hours continue at the Heppner Library for pre-schoolers age 2-5 years from 10:30-11 a.m. each week. Stories, songs and fingerplays are presented by local mothers.

Those assisting in the story hours are Chloe Pearson, Miriam Munck, Cheri Clark, Nancy Aho, Jeannie Fromwiller, Jan Lillybridge, Cindi Wright, Vicki Tollefson, Debby Johnston, Joy Krein, Peggy Fishburn, Brenda Weygant and Judy Maas.

Mothers and pre-schoolers are cordially invited to attend the Thursday morning story hour.
