

County 4-H members judged in 'warm-up' horse show

Morrow County 4-H members had a "Warm-Up" Horse Show May 19 at the Heppner, Oregon fairgrounds.

Ron Davis, Olex, was the judge of the day's activities. 4-H members from three clubs across the county were in attendance. Each member brought a small award to be used as class awards.

The first class, Australian Pursuit Race, ended in a tie between Cindy Stroeber, Heppner, and Theresa Lindsay, Lexington, members of the Two Trackers 4-H Horse Club. This class is basically a trotting race with penalties for breaking into either a walk or canter. Neither Stroeber nor Lindsay could overtake the other and Mr. Davis called the class a tie. Nancy Miller, Heppner, was third. Shawn Paine, Heppner, fourth, and Bridget Greenup, Heppner, fifth.

Judge Ron Davis almost called the second class a tie in "Ride a Buck." Dawn Timms, Irrigon, Mustangs 4-H Horse Club, finally placed first over Cathy Lindsay, Lexington. Timms was able to keep a "fake" dollar bill under her right knee against her horse. Lindsay lost her dollar bill after much riding and changing of gait. Her sister, Ann Lindsay, placed third. Nancy Miller placed fourth, and fifth place went to Theresa Lindsay, the third Lindsay sister.

The Lindsays won the Bareback Equitation class with Cathy taking the top honors. Riders were judged on their ability to ride and control a horse properly without the use of a saddle. Ann Lindsay placed second with third place going to Dawn Timms of Irrigon. Fourth went to Nancy Miller, Heppner and fifth to Alex Lindsay, Lexington.

Back to Back Bareback Equitation was the fourth class. Each horse had two bareback riders; one facing forward in front and the second rider facing rearwards. Entries were asked to walk, trot and canter. The team of Dawn Timms and Ann Marie Evans, Irrigon, captured first place honors. Cindy Stroeber and Bridget Greenup, Heppner, placed third.

The three man rescue race was won by the Lindsay team.

Cathy, Ann and Alex. Second place went to the team of Bobette Angel, Shelly Stroeber, and Nancy Miller, all of Heppner. Third place went to the team of Dawn Timms and Ann Marie Evans of Irrigon, and Bridget Greenup of Heppner. The horse is used to "rescue" team members from one end of the arena and bring them back to the starting line.

The activities ended with a horse judging contest. Classes consisted of fitting and showing, western equitation, a gelding and a mare saddle horse halter class.

Handlers and riders were: Maryann Munkers, Lexington; Becky Evans, Heppner; Merlin Robinson, Heppner and John Nordheim, Heppner.

First place 4-H judge was Ann Lindsay, Lexington, with a score of 364.5. Second place was a tie between Bridget Greenup and Nancy Miller, both of Heppner, with scores of 311.6. Cindy Stroeber, Heppner, placed fourth, with Ann Marie Evans, Irrigon, placing fifth.

Jack Estberg, Heppner, was the high scoring independent judge with a score of 302.9.

Scientists study sagebrush growth

A study of soil and plant relationships in the vast western states' sagebrush ecosystem by scientists at Oregon State University will help find out how best to manage sagebrush for the wildlife that eats it.

For cattle ranchers, the ideal way to manage sagebrush is to remove it because cattle rarely eat it. However, wildlife such as deer and antelope do graze on it, so some species of sagebrush must remain.

Volatiles oils in sagebrush affect its palatability to wildlife. Soil factors such as moisture, mineral content and fertility affect the quantity of oils in the various sagebrush subspecies.

This research study will provide information on which subspecies will benefit wildlife on the soil of a given rangeland. The new knowledge will help guide ranchers' decisions about sagebrush subspecies to be cleared for cattle space and the subspecies to be retained on the range for wildlife use.

The study will be done under a cooperative agreement between Oregon State University and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The agreement calls for $60,000 to be spent on the two-year study with funds from the department's Science and Education Administration (SEA).

Plant ecologist Al Winward, Corvallis, will represent the university and range scientist Forrest A. Smeva, Burns, Ore., will represent SEA.

Horse owners told; vaccinate animals

Oregon horse owners are being reminded by the Oregon Department of Agriculture of the need to vaccinate their animals against equine encephalitis.

State Veterinarian Glenn B. Rea said horses should be vaccinated against the disease before the season for it to appear arrives. He said the state has from one or two up to 14 or 15 confirmed cases yearly, depending on the type of weather during the spring and summer months.

The disease is more common during hot dry weather. It is transmitted by insects, especially mosquitoes. Birds, particularly pheasants and robins, are carriers. The disease can be transmitted to humans as well as horses.

A combined vaccine is available that offers protection against three types of equine encephalitis—eastern, western and Venezuelan. Eastern and western types are more common and appear seasonally in many parts of the United States. However, Rea and the U.S. Department of Agriculture veterinarians recommend that the vaccine covering the three types be used.

They say that while there is no record of any cases of Venezuelan equine encephalitis in the U.S. since 1971 this type could reemerge at any time because it has several hosts other than horses.

Equine encephalitis is often fatal to horses. Initially it may cause hyperactivity in horses, followed by abnormal drowsiness, tremors, lack of coordination and loss of weight. The animal may also chew excessively, have difficulty swallowing, show impaired vision and reduced reflexes and have an irregular gait.
