Dorothy Krebs of Ione was elected vice chairman of the Eastern Oregon State College Regional Services Institute Advisory Committee at its first meeting last week in LaGrande.

Krebs is a commissioner on the Morrow County Court.

Representatives from eleven eastern Oregon cities and towns were represented.

The Institute was funded by the 1979 legislative session to coordinate and initiate services in eastern Oregon.

Institute Director Terry Edvalson told committee members 19 Institute projects are underway.

He explained those projects ranged from utilizing waste wood from bug killed trees and researching the feasibility of producing gasohol in Union County to water quality testing and consulting with small businesses.

EOSC President Rodney Briggs said "Regions 12, 13 and 14 make up more than 40 percent of the state's land mass...but with less than 6 percent of the state's population." He said the Institute can greatly help those scattered people by developing different and effective systems for delivering needed services.

Traffic crashes leading death cause

Substantial progress in reducing traffic fatalities would result in a significant increase in the average life span of Oregonians.

Traffic crashes are the greatest cause of death up to age 45 in Oregon. The very fact that death from this cause is so commonplace is one of the reasons so little progress in preventing them occurs.
